VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

WILLOW STREET (Lancaster Co.) — Three generations of Garber men sat around a kitchen table on a recent morning to sort through old family pictures.

B. Snavely Garber, the grandfather, his son Ken Garber and the grandson, Gerald, sorted through the pile of photographs Snavely Garber had collected through the years.

The perusing of photographs and newspaper clippings of Willows Farm Guernseys was a sign of change at the farm. At 12:30 p.m. on August 1, the farm's Guernsey cattle are being sold at auction.

Seventy head are expected to be put up for sale. Except for at least one cow, "Lee Ann," whom Snavely's great granddaughter has been speaking out for, the brown and white cattle will no longer be blocking traffic on Eshelman Mill Road to get to and from pasture.

Some of the first Guernseys in Lancaster were at the Willows Farm. The herd became well-known for past show-ring performances and pedigree. The dispersal also marks the end of an almost 80-year era of Guernsey dairying

Four generations of Garbers hold the gate to allow their Willows Farm Guernseys to cross the road to pasture, for one of the last times. From the left are Gerald Garber, his father Kenneth, Janice Garber (daughter of Jay) and patriarch B. Snavely Garber. The gentle dairy cattle have been part of the farming operation for more than 80 years and home-bred and raised offspring have been nationally recognized for pedigree and type.

Penn State, Rodale Announce New Joint Venture

READING (Berks Co.) — Rapid urbanization, a trend that continues in Pennsylvania, brings with it a distinct set of challenges for agricultural producers. Government officials from across the state joined educators and researchers in Reading this week to mark the beginning of a new initiative designed to address those challenges.

As dignitaries looked on, officials from the Rodale Institute, a nonprofit, publicly funded research and educational organization located in Kutztown, Pa., and Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences announced the creation of the Penn State/Rodale Center for Sustaining Agriculture and Natural Resources in Urbanizing Environments (SANRUE).

"The center formalizes an ongoing relationship between the College of Agricultural Sciences and the Rodale Institute," says Dr. Herbert Cole, head of Penn State's plant pathology department and the center's first director. Cole says the center will conduct programs in research, education and public policy.

"Both Rodale and Penn State are committed to understanding how we can sustain agriculture, economically and environmentally, especially in the face of rapid urbanization," says the new center's assocaite director, Maria Van Hekken of the Rodale Insititute.

SANRUE is designed to help farmers, policy makers and citizens address the issues raised by urban growth. As residential, commercial and industrial developments spread into traditionally rural areas, agricultural producers face new dilemmas. Conflicts between homeowners and agricultural producers and increasing pressure to protect air and water qualtiy have created an environment rife with contradictions in

Lebanon Hosts Animal Housing Expo

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — Considering changes to the barn, setting up a new operations, or information on anything to do with animal housing should be available to those who attend the 1992 Animal Housing Expo at Lebanon Fairgrounds, July 14 and July 15.

Also speakers are to discuss whether to remodel of build new, site location and building layout for now and the future, regulations and required plans, building for animal comfort, manure management, and expectations of a lender.

The two-day event will have identical schedules each day.

From 9:30 a.m. to 10:10 a.m., Robert Graves, professor with PSU Agricultural and Biological Engineering Department, is to talk about remodeling or building new.

Court Rules Regulators Must Pay

CAMP HILL (Dauphin Co.) — The leader of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) hailed a U.S. Supreme Court ruling announced June 29 which will require regulators to pay for the property rights they take from landowners.

In a 6-2 decision, the Supreme Court overtuned a South Carolina Supreme Court decision in Lucas vs. South Carolina Coastal Council. The U.S. Supreme Court ordered that a state regulatory agency must pay compensation to private landowner David Lucas for its "regulatory taking" of his two beachfront lots.

PFA presidnet Keith Eckel said, "The court ruling means that if land use is regulated for the public good, the public must bear the economic burden of the restrictions, not the landowner alone. It signals a reaffirmation of property rights as guaranteed by the Constitution. In addition, it strengthens the free enterprise system by assuring us that we will benefit through the fruits of our labor."

PFA is a voluntary, statewide farm organization which represents over 23,000 families. It is part of the nation's largest general farm organization, the 3.9-million member American Farm Bureau Federation.

The American Farm Bureau had filed a friend of the court brief in the case in support of landowner Lucas. American Farm Bureau

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

JUNE 29-JULY 5, 1992

DOG DAYS BEGIN JULY 3.

DOG DAYS

The term "Dog Days" conjures up the hottest, most sultry days of summer. The Old Farmer's Almanac lists Dog Days as beginning July 3 and ending August 11, which is the traditional timing, 40 days preceding the cosmical rising of the Dog Star, Sirius. The rising of Sirius does not, of course, actually affect the weather (some of our hottest and most humid days occur after August 11), but for the ancient Egyptians, Sirius appeared just before the season of the Nile's flooding. So, they used Sirius as a "watch dog" for that event, and since it also coincided with a time of extreme heat, the connection of hot, sultry weather and Dog Days was made for all time.

Let others tell of storms and showers,
I'll only mark your sunny hours.

— On a sundial at Pittsfield, Mass.

TIP OF THE WEEK

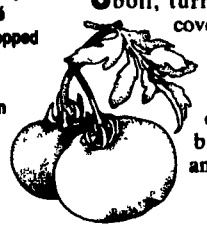
GAZPACHO

- 1-pound can tomatoes with juice
- 10½-ounce can consommé
- 1 cup peeled, seeded, chopped cucumber
- ¾ cup chopped celery
- 2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
- 1 clove garlic, pressed

Combine all ingredients in saucepan, bring just to boil, turn down heat, cover and simmer 10 minutes. Remove from heat. When cool, purée in blender. Chill and serve.

Makes 6 servings.



EARTHWISE

Air conditioning is an energy guzzler, but not one we're likely to give up To ease the energy drain and stay cool, clean or replace the filters every month. When you turn on the air conditioner, don't switch it to a colder setting — it won't cool the room any faster, and it will waste electricity. On hot, sunny days, reduce air conditioning costs by 20% or more by using shades and draperies to block sunlight. Awnings and shade trees are even better because they keep the Sun's rays from striking the window or wall.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

NORTHEAST: Showery and warm then cool, scattered showers; clear and hot on the weekend

SOUTHEAST: Hot and showery, heavy rain and cool north; showers and seasonable west.

MIDWEST: Warm and rainy, locally heavy; turning sunny, hot and humid on the weekend.

NORTHWEST: Cloudy, showery, and cool, clear and warm east; weekend turns sunny and warm.

SOUTHWEST: Rainy and mild mountains and east; sunny desert and California; then sunny days and clear, cool nights.

PREVENT PIGLET CRUSHING

BSM Model 90 Farrowing Crate

Constructed from heavy gauge materials this crate is designed to reduce crushing, with sow comfort in mind. The bowed bottom bars makes for a comfortable 33" crate width when the sow lays down, yet the adjustable anti-crush bars eliminates the sow from carelessly dropping on the piglets.

This movement restriction does not hamper the sow as she lays down, or wants to stand up, as the bars slide up and out of her way.

OPINION

Part Of What We Celebrate

Forging ahead with property development plans or clearing the land, often proves a costly mistake for farmers and real estate professionals who fail to check whether a piece of land is protected by wetlands preservation rules. A maze of governemt regulations with wetlands preservation goals often force a paper chase in search of clear guidlines.

We don't often see farmers who want to preserve farmland on the same side as developers who want to build houses and shopping centers. But because farmers can end up in jail for pouring dirt on their land and developers can experience hugh fines for clearing overgrown vegetation for a site evaluation, maybe these two groups of people should join forces and change the laws that are so unrealistic.

Even if a property doesn't look like a wetland, you have to consider the possibility it might be. These protected areas vary from swamps and marshes to land that may have water only within inches of the surfaces at some time during the year.

The laws are not only an invasion of personal property rights, they are not administered consistently. At least four government agencies, all with different definitions of wetlands, have jurisdiction over what you can do with your land. Penalties for violating wetland laws range from $2,500 to $25,000 per day and imprisonment for negligence. For knowingly violating the law, the fines range from $5,000 to $50,000 per day and imprisonment of up to three years. Additional convictions can result in fines of $100,000 per day and imprisonment of up to six years.

Developers and farmers should join together and get the laws changed. Certainly the real wetlands should be preserved as a national trust. But the private owner who has land that is called wet when it is not, should be free to use the land to farm or for development. Freedom to own land and improve it without government interference is part of what we celebrate on the fourth of July.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Scout For European Corn Borer

The European Corn Borer may be one of the most destructive insect pests of corn.

Research at Penn State has shown that a single corn borer per plant will reduce corn yields by 6 percent when feeding is at the 10-leaf stage and 5 percent when feeding is at the 16-leaf stage.

As the number of borers per plant increases up to 6 per plant, the decrease in yields increases at a linear rate. Penn State entomologists found that 4 larvae per plant will reduce the yield by 20 to 24 percent.

You should begin scouting 7 days after corn is 17 inches, or approximately knee, high. Within a 20- to 40-acre block, randomly select 10 plants at 5 different locations. Then count the larvae. To determine if to spray, calculate anticipated yield loss, value of corn, cost of treatment, and effectiveness of control.

Granular treatment will control approximately 80 percent and a liquid treatment will control about 50 percent of the borers. If you decide to spray, do not spray too early. If most of the larvae are under 1/4 inch in size, the hatch is not complete and wait 3 to 5 days for additional larvae to hatch.

However, spraying should be done before the larvae are 11/16 inches in size. At that size they will leave the whorl and begin tunneling into the stalk where an insecticide treatment will not control them.

To Reduce Risk Of Lightning Strikes

Summer is the time of year when lighting strikes most often.

The "Harvard Health Letter" offers the following suggestions as ways to minimize the risk of a lightning strike:

• Take shelter if possible inside a car or building. Keep away from water and gas pipes, fireplaces, stoves, electrical appliances, and telephones.

• Postpone washing dishes and taking a shower or bath.

• If outdoors, do not take refuge under any tall, isolated object such as tent or a tree. Put down any object that might conduct electricity: umbrella, bicycle, metal bat, etc.

• If outdoors in an open area, seek low ground, and curl up on your side, preferably in a ditch or gully.

• Avoid railroad tracks, isolated machinery, electric fences, and bodies of water. Should you feel the hair on your head, neck, or arms stand on end, lightning may be about to strike. Immediately kneel down, bending forward with your hands on your knees, to become as small a target as possible.

To Check For Blue Mold In Tobacco

Blue mold has been a problem in southern growing regions of the United States since early this year, now it has been found active in a Lancaster County tobacco field. Left uncontrolled under the wrong weather conditions, blue mold can wipe out a tobacco crop.

Early identification and treatment is essential in rescuing the crop. Blue mold is easily identified in the field by the round yellow spots that appear on the top leaf surface. The underside of the leaf will usually have a bluish, grey cottony-like growth present.

Once a plant is infected with blue mold, the leaf lesions can become systemic, causing the blocking of the plant's vascular tissue, which will cause the plant to have slow, very distorted growth.

Control of blue mold should have started in the bed followed with an application of Ridomil to the field before transplanting.

Fields treated in this manner are usually protected 60-plus days. Ridomil can also be applied as a lay-by treatment to the soil at cultivation.

Direct most of the product onto the ground and not the tobacco plant just prior to cultivation. Ridomil absorbed into the root system will protect the entire plant much better than when it is applied to the leaves.

Background Scripture: Nehemiah 1-2.

Devotional Reading: Psalms 122:1-19.

What does it take to get something done in this world? Tonight on television there were visual reports of the millions who are dying of starvation in Africa. Equally disturbing were the reports of great multitudes of people in Bengaladesh who are the victims of a great typhoon.

The commentator said that so far, the Western democracies had not evidenced much interest in helping them. It is ironic to recollect that just a few months ago we spent millions of dollars to help the relatively-well-fixed Kuwaitis, but, as the commentator noted, the people of Bengaladesh and Sudan do not have any oil "to protect."

Have you ever noticed how easy it is to raise money to kill people and how hard to find money to keep people alive? Our country united in its anger and hostility toward one man, Saddam Hussein. If only we could just as surely unite in compassion for the nameless people who have no power.

MOBILIZING TO HEAL

A whole nation was mobilized to wage war with the most advanced technology the world has ever seen. So, how do we mobilize our nation to use some of that technology to wage peace? Maybe we can't solve starvation, disease, ignorance addiction, and crime. But if we can send guided missiles to kill so effectively, can't we at least make some dent in these human miseries?

So, what does it take? It takes a person like Nehemiah, someone who, when confronted with a particular failing of our society, can respond with deep sense of sorrow. Through Hanani, one of his brethren, he receives the devastating news that Jerusalem was desolate and defenseless: "When I heard these words I sat down and wept, and mourned for days..." (1:4). If Nehemiah lived today, he wouldn't switch channels just because he wouldn't want to watch something that is unsettling.

Nehemiah did more than weep — he prayed: "...and I continued fasting and praying before the God of heaven." This evening, after the TV report was finished, it occurred to me that problems like mass starvation and others rarely get into my prayers. I pray for my family, my friends, and for those who ask me. But how often do I pray for the nameless starving, homeless, sick, destitute, lonely, and imprisoned. Not very often. Is it just because it is more natural to pray for those whom we know in some way, or is it because we know unconsciously that to pray for these people might place upon us the obligation to do something about it?

Nehemiah realized that the sad condition of Jerusalem was due to the sins of his people: "I now pray before thee day and night for the people of Israel...confessing the sins...which we have sinned against thee" (1:6). Most of our human tragedies are the result of human sin and it takes repentance if we are to do something about them.

Nehemiah was an important person who used his position to get something done. Hanani was a person of lesser stature who also did what he could do: he told Nehemiah. Without him, there likely would have been no decree from the King.

Milk Producers Must Plan Profit

S.A FORD
PSU Ag Economist

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Many milk producers treat profit as a residual—whatever is left at the end of the year after paying expenses is profit.

Milk producers should instead be planning for profit by setting a profit target and cost-of-production goal.

Target profit level for milk production is an individual farm decision. For example, the target profit level might be the desired return to owner labor, management, and farm equity.

Target profit is put on a hundredweight basis by dividing the target by total farm milk sales.

If the target profit is $20,000 for the milk enterprise, and 9600 hundredweights of milk are sold (60 cows milking 16,000 lbs.), then the target profit per hundredweight of milk sold is $2.08.

In other words, the milk producer must be able to pocket $2.08 out of every hundredweight of milk sold to meet the $20,000 target profit. If milk price averages $13.00 per hundredweight, costs of production must then be held to $10.92 per hundredweight or below to meet the profit goal.

If the target profit was $25,000, then the profit per hundredweight needed would be $2.60, and the cost of production would need to be below $10.40 per hundredweight.

The effects of herd size and production per cow can also be seen when profit targets are considered.

If the milk producer milks 70 cows instead of 60, the amount required per hundredweight to meet the profit goal decreases to $1.79.

If milk production increases 1,000 pounds per cow, the amount required to meet the profit goal falls to $1.96.

Milk producers should also consider cash flow needs.

The target approach presented above can also be applied to a cash-flow target. The cash-flow target could include family living expenses, tax obligations, and debt service needs.

Both profit and cash-flow targets must be met to ensure the financial health and longevity of the dairy farm.

Using the target profit approach to farm management serves two purposes.

Definite goals for the farm business are established which the milk producer can work toward. And examination of the profit goal and resulting cost of production requirement per hundredweight of milk help determine the feasibility of the goals, and identify possible strategies to meet the goal in terms of milk production and cost of production.

Milk producers need to plan for profits instead of just taking what is left over at the end of the year.

Big Plans For Northeast Poultry Show

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — With two-thirds of the booths sold, the producers of this year's Northeast Poultry Show are swinging into the home stretch.

The show, set for Lancaster, from September 29 - October 2, will include the broiler, turkey, and egg industries.

From the golf outing on the first day until the banquet on the last day, there will be plenty of exhibtor-attendee dialogue.

"This is an excellent opportunity for exhibitors to decrease their cost per sale, introduce new products and services, increase prestige, and network with counterparts," said Mac McLaurin, trade show director.

"We will again have interesting and informative seminars and workshops," said John Hoffman, conference director. Last year attendees gave the event high marks and 100 percent of those polled said they intend to come back this year.

For information on booths, contact McLaurin at (202)296-8248. Regarding conference registration, call Hoffman at (717)652-7530.

Water Quality Topic Of Tour

YORK (York Co.) — "Water Quality" will be the topic of a farm tour sponsored by the York County Conservation District and the Chesapeake Bay Program.

The tour will be held on July 22 in the Airville/Delta/Fawn Grove area and on July 29 in the Dover/East Berlin/Kralltown area of York County.

Topics to be covered include nutrient management, manure spreader calibration, soil conservation planning and practices, animal waste management systems, cost share program, and other related topics.

NFO Offers Cull Cow Program

AMES, Iowa — More and more dairy producers and beef cattle producers are turning their cull cow sales into a "farm profit center" by participating in the National Farmers Organization's cull cow program.

"All too often, producers don't understand the importance of cull cows and how they can profit from them," said Pat Lewis, NFO slaughter cattle negotiator.

The NFO cull cow program, administered by the NFO Slaughter Cow Cattle Division, represents beef and dairy cattle. It merges small enterprises' cows to form a large volume block. That large volume helped make the NFO the nation's largest cull cow supplier. "We've always taken great pride in that," Lewis said.

According to Lewis, during early June the negoitiated meat price was 95-cents per cwt.

"NFO negotiators compared that with the beef retail price and decided the producers weren't receiving their fair share," he said. "NFO put together a mini-block of several hundred head from Minnesota, Wisconsin, Ohio and Michigan. We took them out of the Midwest to a packer in the South. The cull cow price soon rose to $1 per cwt.

After the cows left the area, local packers began looking for cows. "The packer who paid 95-cents earlier in the week paid $1.03 by week's end," Lewis said. "The next week, we saw cow prices open at $1.05.

. Cull cows represent 17 to 18 percent of total beef slaughter. They are used mostly for hamburger, the retail beef foundation. Consequently, cull cows tend to floor the entire beef market, Lewis said.

"If we price cull cows equitably, then we force the industry to price steers and heifers that much higher," he said. "We've pleased with our ability to stabilize the cull cow market and consequently, all beef prices.

"Cull cows represent special profit centers in dairy enterprises, provided owners market the cows wisely," said Lewis. "Dairy producers cull 25 to 30 percent of thier cows annually. These sales represent 15 to 20 percent of gross income. In many cases, cull cow sales represent 40 to 50 percenet of net income.

"Each week, the NFO supplies thousands of cull cows to packers nationwide," he said. "Consequently, the NFO's ability to floor the market and earn cull cow premiums keeps growing."

Large feedlots often gain a market leverage advantage with the volume they control. "But NFO's group marketing program levels the playing field. Producers don't need to expand to gain a volume advantage. Taking one cow from one producer and putting her in a package with a neighbor's cow lets both producers participate in the nation's largest cull cow supply."

Walt Albers, NFO Dairy Department director, said the cull cow program takes milk off teh market and keeps supply and demand in line. "From April 1991 to April 1992, the milking herd in the top 21 dairy producing states dropped 158,000 head," says Albers. "That took 2.2.-billion pounds of milk permanently off the market. If those cows hadn't been culled, we'd have extrememly low milk prices."

Lewis said, "With the Fourth of July coming up, packers ae starting to gear up for the increased hamburger demand. Cow prices generally rise to meet the increased demand and we're hoping that holds true this year."

Lewis said, "Because of NFO's huge cull cow inventory, our members today are a market force that the packing industry more and more looks to for a reliable supply. The program is strong enough that the NFO exerts real upward pressure on cull cow prices. We are the cull cow market today."

Your Farm Credit Banker. Nobody Knows The Field Better.

Sure, you'll find Farm Credit bankers all buttoned up, ready to talk short- or long-term loans, mortgages, and sophisticated lines of credit.

But underneath the shirt and tie, you'll find the one thing the other banks don't offer. A fellow farmer.

Most Farm Credit loan officers were born and raised on farms and got their college degrees from ag schools. Nearly all of them grew up with 4-H and the Future Farmers of America.

And if that's not enough, every single one of our loan officers goes through the toughest ag lending training program in America.

That means when you talk to a Farm Credit loan officer about any kind of ag loan, you won't have to waste your time translating to someone who's book smart but farm foolish.

What's more, because Farm Credit loan officers understand farming as well as they understand finances, they're not only smarter, they're faster. After all, they have the same loan closing authority as many local bank presidents.

So when you need competitive rates or creative options, see your local Farm Credit banker. Because nobody knows the field better.

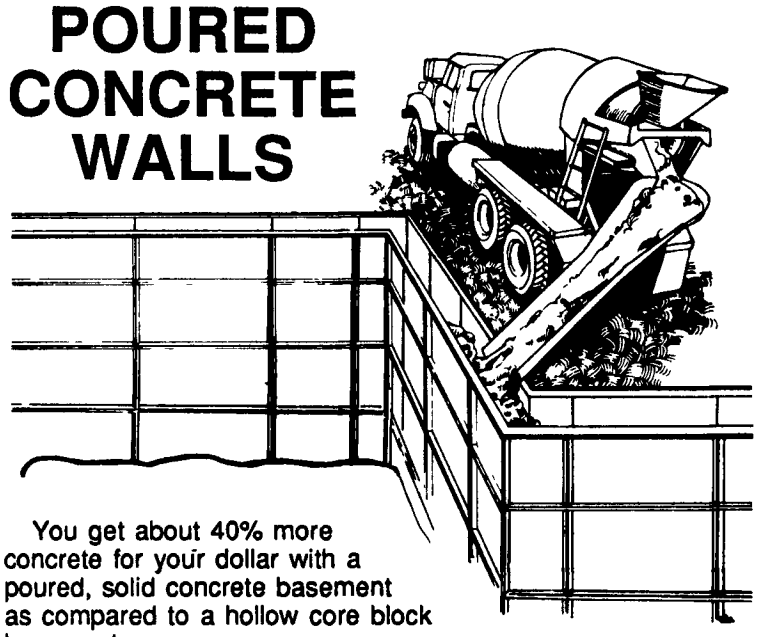
POURED SOLID CONCRETE STORAGE SYSTEM SPECIALISTS

START WITH THE BEST!

POURED CONCRETE WALLS



You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement.

A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs. more per cubic foot! Far denser. What's more, poured solid concrete walls are monolithic ... there are no joints!

This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth, wind, water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration.

Best of all, thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques, poured, solid concrete basements are competitively priced.

Solid Concrete For:

- Manure Pit Walls
- Hog House Walls
- Barnyard Walls
- Chicken House Walls
- Retaining Walls
- House Foundation Walls
- Silage Pit Walls

Willows Farm

There will be some star animals and a lot of above average cattle at the sale. Willows Jasper Heidi, and Excellent 90 with an estimated 305-day lactation production of 18,660 pounds of milk, 833 pounds of fat and 622 pounds of protein, bred to Perfecto, is one such star. As a 2- and 3-year-old, she posted records in excess of 20,000 pounds milk and equally strong component production.

The top American Guernsey sire for type is a Willows Farm product. And a review of recent rankings shows that 62 Willows Farm prefix cows are listed in the top 300 cows of the breed, according to the American Guernsey Association.

The family is pro-Guernsey, with Gerald receiving honors as a national Guernsey youth in 1984, and in 1986, his sister Janice being named national Guernsey Queen.

But change is nothing new at Willows Farm. In fact it's almost surprising the Guernsey's have stayed this long, given the many areas in which the hands of H.H. Snavely, B. Snavely Garber, and now the younger Garber generations have reached.

"Buffalo might be next," B. Snavely said, grinning with a sideways wink.

However, his jest (if it is) is a comment on what all the Garbers say about themselves — "We work hard finding ways to work less," Snavely said.

The Garbers have always been a little more mechanically inclined, Kenneth Garber said. And the clan claims a number of creations which have helped them in business, such as Snavely's six-row tomatoe picker; Kenneth's combination vehicle silo-filler and bale hauler; and Jay Garber's liquid manure hauling trucks. These vehicles and creations are one-of-a kind, more than a little modified to make use easier.

Snavely was driving a horse-pulled Conestoga wagon for tourists in addition to other ventures.

In fact, being too busy with other interests is the main reason for the dispersal. All the Garbers enjoy dairy cattle, but have their own businesses to run, and practically everybody works at some side business off the farm in addition to the other jobs.

Since 1957, Kenneth has been offering custom silo filling starting with a small horsepower one-row chopper to using a four-row chopper with 225 horsepower.

With his specially designed, front-end unloading, modified truck tractor and wagon, Kenneth offers a service to area farmers who don't want to or can't make the investment in a large piece of machinery.

Gerald has been primarily caring for the herd, but because he has been involved with his brother in manure hauling, and has slowly been increasing service as a minister, he doesn't have the time to devote to tending the herd, crops, milking, breeding, etc.

(Gerald is ministering in the church started by Hans Herr, to whom Gerald is an 11th generation descendant. The historic Hans Herr homestead is a short buggy ride from the Willows Farm.)

In fact, that's the real reason the herd is being liquidated — in the near future, there really isn't anyone in the family who can devote time to the herd.

So change is inevitable.

But then that is part of the Willows Farm heritage.

H.H. Snavely, B. Snavley Garber's uncle and guardian, was an entrepreneur, agriculturalist and community-minded man who first brought Guernseys to the farm in 1913, on a return trip from Switzerland with his wife, Amanda. The two were in Zurich attending a world Sabbath school convention.

According to B. Snavely Garber, H.H. Snavely stopped at the Isle of Guernsey on the return trip and ordered three Guernsey heifers. By 1916, the Snavelys were making and selling 90 pounds of butter a week.

That was but one business interest of H.H. Snavely.

According to his descendant relation, there wasn't much that old H.H. Snavely wasn't involved in or a venture that he wouldn't give consideration.

That entrepreneurial spirit and motivation have continued down the line.

B. Snavely Garber, who, as a youth, came to live with his uncle, grew up involved in a number of his uncle's operations — raising tomatoes, Hampshire hogs, tobacco, beef, dairying, making and selling butter, milk, beans . . .

In fact, H.H. Snavely's tomato raising and marketing operation inspired Snavely Garber to invent his patented, self-propelled, six-row tomato picker.

It was used for eight years on the farm to speed the harvest of ripe tomatoes for sale to a canning operation. A tomato blight ended the tomatoe business.

"I said to my uncle, 'Why doesn't somebody invent a better way to pick tomatoes?'" Snavely Garber said, adding that his uncle replied that until such a device was made, Garber was unfortunately going to have to continue picking tomatoes the old way.

The picker came as a boon to the Snavely tomatoe operation.

It offered four hammocks on which the people would lie, face down, with their arms and hands free to reach down to pluck ripe tomatoes and to place them on a conveyor which took them to a bin.

The height of the hammocks was made adjustable, similar to a hand crank hospital bed setup, so that people of varying dimension could have equal access to tomatoes.

"He loved it," Snavely Garber said, laughing. "All he had to do was drive the truck with the tomatoes."

The contraption still hangs in one of the buildings, complete with catcher's masks used to provide facial support for the picker to relieve neck strain from holding

(Turn to Page A23)

Gerald Garber smiles as B. Snavely Garber tells him a story about the photo he is looking at. The review of family photos, especially those surrounding H.H. Snavely and the Guernsey cows, was induced by the coming complete herd dispersal; an end of an era for the farm and Lancaster County.

Jennica Garber clings to father Kenneth's hand as he explains the reversible direction front unloading silage and hay hauler he had created for his 30-year-old custom silage cutting and silo filling operation.

These Guernsey-bred heifers just arrived from the Isle of Guernsey to the Willows Farm. The year is 1913. Although there are no cattle still on the farm which are directly descendant to these three, Guernseys have been on the farm since at least then.

Jay Garber stands next to one of his two 5,000 gallon, customized manure hauling trucks. He and brother Gerald are partners in the business.

School Program Helps

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — The results are in! The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council's (ADADC) "Breakfast in School is Cool" promotion last fall increased milk sales by increasing school breakfast participation in schools in New York, northeastern Pennsylvania and northern New Jersey.

Based on surveys returned to ADADC, school breakfast participation increased an average of 10 percent. A carton of milk is included with every school breakfast served, making this an important promotion for the dairy industry.

Richmondville Central School, one of the winners of the promotion contest, attributes their increase of 22 percent in participation directly to ADADC's promotion.

Leslie Bennett, manager and cook at Richmondville Central School, said, "We sent flyers promoting school breakfast home to parents of elementary students, and immediately noticed an increase in breakfast participation. Prior to the promotion, many parents weren't aware of the availability of school breakfast."

Currently, 59.4 percent of New York State schools, 24.6 percent of New Jersey schools and 29.5 percent of Pennsylvania schools offering school lunch also offer breakfast.

To further enhance the promotion, 71 school foodservice workshops promoting school breakfast were held and 10 exhibits were set up at school foodservice meetings.

This fall, ADADC will again offer the "Breakfast in School is Cool" promotion to schools that participate in the school breakfast program.

The American Dairy Assocaition and Dairy Council, Inc. is a dairy promotion organization representing dairy farmers in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

the head in place.

Garber never sold his picker, but some other local designs which were variations of Garber's idea, did become popular.

Another side business cropped up after B. Snavely heard a speaker discussing how Lancaster residents should open up to tourism and educate tourists.

Snavely started giving wagon tours with a historical accounting of the buildings and development of the area. He ran tours from the house using the Percheron horses to haul a wagon. Then he moved the wagon tours to the Amish Farming House in Brunswick.

Many family ancedotes came out during the photo-perusing session, some of which the other Garbers knew well. Some stories B. Snavely had never told before, or as completely before.

Nevertheless, the cow photos of most interest weren't necessarily the ones which highlighted the cows. The photos most lingered upon were the ones showing H.H. Snavely.

According to the B. Snavely Garber, H.H. Snavely wouldn't have minded the sale at all. In fact, he may have sold them before now.

Kimmels Turn Road Block Into Ice Cream Stop

GAY N. BROWNLEE
Somerset Co.

BERLIN (Somerset Co.) — It was not only inconvenient, but a bit embrassing to be stopping traffic twice daily on the township road that separates the barn and pastureland of Jim and Joann Kimmel's farm.

The occasional scowls plastered on the faces of a few drivers who were running late were understandable.

"People were going to and from work and we could sense from the expression on their faces, they weren't too happy," said Joann.

But since a strip of land behind the barn is not part of their three farms (though Jim has tried unsuccessfully to buy it), the main grazing acres for the Holstein dairy herd are across the paved road. Morning and evening, the cows crossing over to the barn to be milked hold back the flow of traffic.

So about five years ago during June Dairy Month, the Kimmel's began to serve ice cream bars to occupants of the stopped vehicles to tell them about dairy products and that June is dairy month. They saw impatience replaced by big smiles on the faces of the recipients. A tradition was begun.

With the idea gathering momentum (word of moo-uth advertising), folks enjoyed getting into the traffic patterns just around the Kimmel milking time and the cool, cream hand-out grew into an investment that needed some additional sponsorship.

So Jim and Joann said they took their idea to the Allied Milk Producers' Cooperative, Inc. of which they are members; and to Sani-Dairy, Johnstown, who buys their milk. Both got involved, seeing the scheme as good for dairy products promotion. Jim said every June they pass out six to seven hundred ice cream treats.

One time, he said, they got a bus with some 15 riders on it. One lady raved about how nice it was and how she appreciated the gesture. For the sake of novelty, Jim sometimes slips on a hand puppet cow to deliver the ice cream.

Mark Martin, husband of the Kimmel's youngest daughter, Tammy is a partner in the business. Jim and Joann had no sons until their three daughters each married.

"My husband and him get along better than any father and son," said Joann with unmistakable pride. She said that when he was around age eight, Mark was a neighbor kid who persisted in hanging around the farm because he was in love with it. "We'd send him home and a half hour later he'd be back," she said laughing.

It was years later when Mark's interest in the farm began to include the farmer's daughter.

Their farms have a combined acreage of 570 on which are five separate houses. Jim, who was raised here, has always been a farmer. He raises hay, corn and oats.

"Last year we were short in hay," he said. "The second crop was when it (1991 drought) hit us. We had all the silage and haylage we needed. We were lucky," Jim said. "We had reserves from the year before."

He said, too, that the well has never failed to provide ample water for the house and barn. It was drilled in the early 40s.

The Kimmel's two older daughters - Sandra Seifert and Barbara Walker - work teaching school and nursing, but along with their husbands, they always pitch in and help with anything around the farm that needs to be done.

Joann is truly the covetous grandmother of her five grandchildren, four girls and one little boy. She is their babysitter.

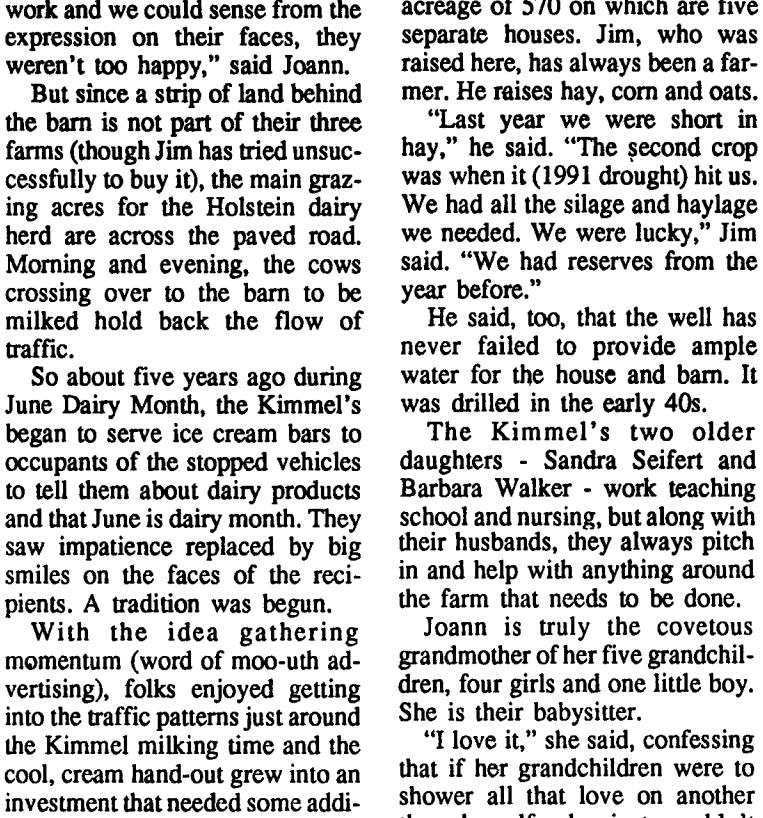
"I love it," she said, confessing that if her grandchildren were to shower all that love on another than herself, she just couldn't stand it.

The family is very close knit and loving to one another, so it's little wonder that the girls told their mother that if she didn't want to be the babysitter, they would not work outside their home.

Joann said that Jim, who is a very easygoing man, never paddled their girls himself. But if they were misbehaving, he would look at her and say, "Joann, do something about that!"

"Our success in having a good family life was we worked with our own girls," said Joann, who has played a major role in getting a Dairy of Distinction rating for their farm. "They're real good housekeepers and can accept disappointments better than some," she said of their daughters.

"I'm so pleased with my family and glad they get along like they do."



Joann and Jim Kimmel, with their pet Pomeranian dog sit outside their home. The couple has turned their traffic-blocking, cow-road-crossing into a dairy promotion opportunity which also helps with neighbor relations.

Using his Holstein cow hand puppet, Jim Kimmel passes an ice cream bar to William Zelenok, of Friedens, who had to stop his auto to let Kimmel's cows cross the road.

Jim Kimmel keeps one eye on the cows and one arm on the box of ice cream bars he hands out to motorists forced to delay their traveling. As a dairy promotion gimmick, Kimmel has received support from processors.

Two Rural Support Bills Made Law

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Gov. Robert P. Casey has signed two bills aimed at strengthening Pennsylvania's rural communities.

One bill creates a loan forgiveness program to encourage Pennsylvania students to study agriculture or veterinary medicine. The second bill establishes a leadership training program for citizens and local officials in rural areas.

The bills are part of a legislative package aimed at promoting the growth and development of Pennsylvania's rural communities and agriculture industry.

"We've worked hard over the past five-and-a-half years to preserve and strengthen Pennsylvania's rural way of life," Gov. Casey said. "These bills provide additional support for our rural areas and our agriculture industry, which play such an important role in our state."

Under the agriculture education loan forgiveness program (House Bill 1313), college graduates who hold an agriculture-related degree will have part of their school loans forgiven if they begin full-time work on family farms or practicing veterinary medicine after July 1, 1991.

The Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency will be permitted to forgive up to $2,000 per year of outstanding loans for qualified applicants.

The total loan forgiveness cannot exceed $10,000.

The bill takes effect immediately. It will expire on July 1, 1993.

The second bill, House Bill 1492, calls for the state Department of Community Affairs to administer an educational program for citizens and local officials of rural communities to assist them in developing skills in community leadership. The bill also takes effect immediately.

Counties Receive Promotion Kits

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Summer county fairs and local events provide a unique opportunity for local dairy promotion groups to inform thousands of people about dairy products.

To make promoting dairy products easier, the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council (ADADC) will once again provide local counties in ADADC's marketing area with Dairy Promotion Starter Kits. The kits are designed to deliver a positive message about dairy products, and attract consumers to fair booths or local events.

Each free starter kit includes one large ADADC/dairy promotion banner, two dairy promotion posters, 200 recipe leaflets, 200 cow coloring sheets, 200 bookmarks and 500 "I Love Milk" stickers.

The packets will give local county groups a head start on promoting dairy products at county fairs and other local events. Dairy promoters exhibiting at county fairs may obtain the kits from ADADC district directors by July.

For more information about the starter kits, contact your ADADC district director, or ADADC in Syracuse at (315)472-9143. ADADC is a dairy promotion organization representing dairy farmers and producers in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Casey Signs, Blue Lines Budget

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania has a budget in place by deadline, but nobody in or out of Harrisburg has expressed any satisfaction with the spending plan.

On Tuesday Gov. Robert Casey signed a $14.2 billion spending plan for the 1992-93 fiscal year, while eliminating $71.3 million from several areas of government.

He said he plans to convince the state Legislature to use that money for programs that he wants funded.

The disatisfaction with the spending plan largely is a result of the House Democrats fowarding a version of the spending plan that was not intended for final settlement, according to all involved.

The plan approved by Casey, though he announced his disatisfaction with the plan and his intention to try to influence spending changes through legislation in the coming year, was a Senate-amended House version. The House version was an altered version of the proposal announced early in the year by Casey.

All factions said they expect some financial details to be worked out politically in the fall through the General Assembly.

Agriculture suffered several key financial blows, most notably to the state veterinarian school at the University of Pennsylvania, agricultural promotion, agricultural research through the state Department of Agriculture, and animal indemnities.

Also cut, but receiving mixed opinion as to the damage, was the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board, which anticipated a cut of about $800,000. The PMMB had earlier stated that it could function on increased permit fees to the dairy industry and a minimum of $125,000 which is to be used for consumer protection.

During his tenure as governor, Casey has repeatedly eliminated funding for the PMMB, agricultural research, and many agricultural programs including the state Department of Agriculture, while claiming to support the state's leading industry in his public speaches and proclamations.

Sheila Miller, executive director of the Senate Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee, on Wednesday said, "We expected this kind of cut. This comes as no surprise because the governor has been leading up to this major reduction in general fund support for the board," she said.

In fact, Miller said the board promulagated regulations in May that would increase dealer fees to compensate for the anticipated lack of state support.

"By law, the PMMB must have a bureau of consumer affairs to provide information on milk pricing to the general public and to respond to general questions from the consumer," Miller said. "So it is appropriate that General Fund money — common tax dollars — be used to pay for this rather than the milk industry."

According to Miller, the budget for the PMMB will allow it very little flexibility outside a strict, planned schedule.

Steve Crawford, Miller's counterpart in the House of Representatives, said that bickering among representatives was largely to blame for the failure of legislators to reach an agreeable compromise on the budget.

"I think the bottom lines is, the sate needed a budget and it was very clear to all involved that certain members in the negotiating team were not interested in negotiating," Crawford said.

According to Crawford, is wasn't a party-line dispute this time, but seemed more to be certain members in the same party looking to position themselves in the public eye for political gain.

Crawford said "They put bickering ahead of the needs of the state and it became clear to legislative leaders on our side that there had been and would be no responsible effort to negotiate."

According to Crawford that's when the decision was made to approve the Senate modified House spending plan and send it to the governor's desk.

Casey signed the bill, but the governor of Pennsylvania has a line-item veto authority, which means he can approve a measure while changing it through reducing line items amounts.

His cuts amounted to:

- A reduction from $483,000 to $400,000 for agricultural promotion, excluding urband farm market promotion.
- Cutting agricultural research funding from a proposed $2,364,000, back to $1,680,000.
- Reducing the allocation for animal indemnities in disease eradictaion programs from $241,000 to $200,000.
- Scaled back the state Farm Show budget from $965,000 (it has been staying around $1 million for several years) to $700,000.
- Eliminating all of the proposed $483,000 funding for a rural post-secondary learning program. The program is designed to help academically strong, but financially incapable, students go on to college.
- Reduced the tax-dollar support to the PMMB from $903,000 to $125,000.

The Pennsylvania Farmers Association has also come out in sharp criticizm of the governor's vetoed spending.

"Failure to fund the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine will virtually destroy an extremely vital support service, necessary to the health and welfare of domestic farm animals and citizens of this state," said PFA President Keith Eckel. "It's disgraceful to destroy such an important program and institution."

Further, Eckel railed against the governor's reneging on his promise to increase by $170 million instructional subsidies for the state's 501 public school districts, ". . . will have disasterous effects on rural communities already pressed with increasing educational costs. We all know the necessary funds will come from increased property taxes. Farmers already pay an unfair portion of the educational cost in rural areas."

Eckel also stated that the veterinary school administration had said that without the appropriation of $17.4 million that it needs, this year's starting class would be the last.

Efforts were made in the House, and defeated, to have the school funded through legislation which would have made the private school funding mandatory, instead of discretionary. Gov. Casey has already said he would not give state support to private schools.

Gene Schenck, PDA press secretary, said the Senate's modification of a 5-percent across the board reduction in government agency general operating funds does not leave enough money for the agriculture department to operate for the entire fiscal year.

In his budget proposal, Casey had earmarked $18.8 million for the general operating budget of the PDA. The House then further trimmed that back to less than $18.5 million without comment from the PDA. Also, there was no comment from PDA when the Senate initially amended the House version to include the straight 5-percent decrease.

However, in the wake of events, Schenck said the cuts which Casey approved severly threaten the ability of the department to function.

The department has been going along with continual reductions in overhead spending which Casey has been imposing every year since taking office.

The last several budgets have ranged in description by the department from "austere" to "bare bones." According to Schenck, the original $18.8 million proposed by Casey in his early budget was "bare bones."

"We wind up with $17.5 million dollars in operating funds. This is not enough money to operate with 395 full time employees. It's just

Record Limousin Numbers Build Excitement

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — "Given the record numbers for all the events associated with our summer national shows, there has never been a more anticipated Limousin event in the United States," said Alan Sears, director of special activities for the North American Limousin Foundation (NALF).

The July 13-18 shows in Ft. Worth, Texas include the Lone Star Shoot-Out National Junior Limousin Show and Congress, the All American Limousin Futurity, and the Limousin Gathering Show.

With 477 entries — 408 heifers and 69 steers — from 274 exhibitors in 21 states entered in the junior show, the old entry record has been shattered.

Likewise, the All American Limousin Futurity features a new entry record with 100 bulls, 322 females and 11 pairs entered.

The Gathering Limousin Show — a first-time Limousin event featuring pairs of bred heifers and pairs of cow/calf pairs shown unfitted and unhaltered — has attracted 45 entries (124 head) for its debut.

"Between the three shows, chances are there will be more Limousin assembled for exhibition in Ft. Worth than have ever been assembled for a single Limousin exhibition before in North America," said Sears.

Added excitement for the week comes compliments of the approximately 200 Limousin breeders from 16 countries expected for the 10th biannual World Limousin Cattle Conference, which is being held in conjunction with the other Limousin events.

Dairy Promo Seminar Trains Princesses

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Dairy promotion representatives from throughout New York state will attend an annual training seminar July 7-9 at Morrisville College.

The seminar is sponsored each year by the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council.

Dairy princesses, dairy maids and ambassadors, as well as county promotion volunteers, will attend the seminar. A variety of workshops, designed to prepare participants for a busy year of promoting dairy products, have been planned.

Participation in hands-on workshops will help the princesses gain experience in dairy promotion techniques. Workshops will focus on teaching promoters to reach elementary age school children, make radio public service announcements and write news articles.

A media workshop designed to prepare participants to respond to on-the-spot interviews will also be held. This workshop will allow the princesses to practice answering questions with confidence, knowledge and poise.

As part of the three-day session, county dairy princesses will be briefed on the format of the annual New York State Dairy Princess Pageant which will be held in February of 1993. Princesses will receive advice and information on participating in the pageant.

More than 180 dairy representatives are expected to take part in the training seminar. For further information on the seminar, contact Shirley Griffith at (315)472-9143.

not enough money," Schenck said Wednesday.

"The reduction in the regulatory areas put ordinary people at risk," Schenck said. "This kind of a budget — unless they come back and fix things, restore that funding — means fewer food inspections, it's reduced our capability to to control animal and plant diseases. For example, half our ability to deal with the outbreak of psuedorabies.

"It'll reduce the ability to promote the safe use of pesticides. It's going to make it hard to control rabies."

However, Casey is not to blame, according to Schenck. He said the legislature, primarily the Senate, is to pinpointed for creating the problem.

"The Legislature is responsible. Until they come back and repair these things, it's a lousy budget."

In fact, instead of criticizing Casey, Schenck praised him.

"He had to blue line that stuff to make funding available to operate the state," he said. "Now there's funding available so they can come back and restore so we can operate the department. We need to fund the ordinary things we do from day to day. These things are important to ordinary farmers."

NDB Approves Coordinated Programs

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Dairy Promotion and Research Board remained true to its mission to work with others to leverage and better coordinate dairy farmers' dollars at its annual meeting May 20-21.

"We've listened and we're responding to dairy farmers," said newly-elected chairman Jim Loper.

"As chairman, I am committed to coordinating promotion whenever we can save dairy farmers' money," the New Mexico dairy farmer said. "They'll be no lip service here. We make decisions because we believe in what we're doing and trying to accomplish."

NDB members voted to fund market research cooperatively with a major food processor preparing to market a carbonated dairy beverage. NDB will use this market research to learn more about consumer reactions to the concept of carbonated dairy drinks.

The information is to help NDB's product research to plan their efforts for developing dairy drinks. By working a company, NDB leverages its money with industry, getting the market information it wants for much fewer checkoff dollars, while sharing marketing experience to enhance learning.

For this year's Thanksgiving and Christmas seasons, NDB approved funding as part of an industry wide holiday butter promotion. NDB will provide up to $3.8 million. Television advertising accounts for $2.2 million, while consumer print advertising funded by NDB will amount to $1.6 million.

So far, the United Dairy Industry Association and Wisconsin Milk Marketing Board have also committed to the promotion providing additional consumer print advertising, public relations and trade promotion.

NDB also approved an ice cream commercial for production and use. The commercial will air on network television during early-mid July to support this summer's joint campaign with UDIA and tie-in partner Hershey, promoting ice cream and toppings.

After gathering advice from scientific researchers and food company marketers, NDB selected 13 research projects for funding. The advice from researchers and marketers helped board members decide which projects offered the best potential for developing new products or processes which would sell more milk.

Projects approved for funding included improving Swiss cheese quality through improved ripening, establishing dairy and food product consumption patterns of the elderly and fractionating skim milk by microfiltration to develop a cholesterol-free, fat-free milk.

The National Dairy Promotion and Research Board, composed of 36 dairy farmers from across the nation, develops and executes a coordinated program of advertising, research and nutrition communications to strengthen the dairy industry's position in the marketplace. This effort is financed by America's dairy farmers.

Milk Producers May Comment

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Milk producers and others interested are invited to comment on USDA's proposal to prohibit excessive manufacturing allowances in state marketing orders for milk.

Under the proposal, states using formulas to price milk used to produce butter, nonfat dry milk or cheese would not use a manufacturing allowance greater than those used in the federal price support program.

Donald Unangst, state executive director for the Pennsylvania State Office fo the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said the current price support program allowances are $1.22 per hundredweight for milk made into butter and nofat dry milk and $1.37 for milk made into cheese.

Written comments on state milk marketing orders must be received no later than July 20. Send them to: Charles Shaw, Director, Dairy Analysis Division, ASCS-USDA, P.O. Box 2415, Washington, D.C., 20013.

MAKE MORE PROFIT IN 10 DIFFERENT WAYS

No. 1 Use our high mineral fertilizer, then the plant can choose minerals by instinct what it needs, better than a computer, and there is little or no extra cost in buying minerals at $16 to $20 per 50 lb. bag. Our way you get better balanced minerals free.

No. 2 With the above method, livestock will produce better with less vet. and drug bills, same as people who eat out of an organic garden. Top dairymen are going organic!

No. 3 Livestock need considerable less feed (well proven) because a pound or bushel of feed has more nutrition.

No. 4 With our toxic free, mineral rich fertilizer, the crop will be too sweet for the bugs, which saves pesticides. Bugs can't digest real sweet crops. They are sent to devour unhealthy crops so that we and our livestock don't eat them. When crops are real healthy, they will leave them for us. Good, wise Creator's plan! We have much proof. It isn't just sales talk. Why don't our genuine customers need pesticides?

No. 5 On our program you can control weeds better, without herbicides. I used to be reluctant to say it for fear of being called a liar, but now we have too much proof to ignore it.

No. 6 Less tillage and irrigation needed because soil and subsoil are loose and spongy thru earthworm activity. Such soil holds the spring rains for later use. And with a broken hardpan, roots can go down. Even children know that a sponge holds more water than a brick and that loose soil plows easier.

No. 7 Grains have a quieter drydown, earlier maturing, saving money in drying.

No. 8 GROW NON-TOXIC SPELTZ FOR US. 2,000 ACRES ARE NEEDED IN PA. AT 10¢ PER LB., 10½ ¢ FOR CERTIFIED ORGANIC. HUGE AMOUNTS ARE NEEDED FOR FLOUR IN CANADA AND OVERSEAS. Sow same time as wheat. Combine a few days later. Usually produces about 100 bu. or more per acre. Some organic farmers receive 150 bu. per acre. Order seed now. Supply is limited.

No. 9 Grow non-toxic large white soybeans for human consumption at $12 per bu. The demand is much greater than supply. Condition your soil this year for next year with our long lasting Nutri Carb fertilizer.

No. 10 We have an excellent mineral rich fertilizer for only $85 per ton bulk. Lasts for several years. Ideal for all crops including pasture and hay which time is now. Spreading available.

If these 10 advantages don't appeal to you, then you need to eat organically grown food. The real intelligent people do. Better balanced, toxic free food produces better balance in the brain. I thought I should mention, I write this way to get your attention. Then when I get you to reading, the rest will take care. Once you have your faith built up like Abraham and Sarah.

I INVITE YOU TO 3 DAYS MEETINGS OF TEACHING AND OBSERVING NATURAL METHODS OF FARMING and livestock husbandry on the farm of Roman Stoltzfoos near Gap, Lancaster Co. The 3rd day is showing composting Romans' cow manure and other organic materials with an imported machine on his farm. It is worth driving for to see it. Replaces fertilizer, hard on us dealers, but we love to help people and will therefore get new customers.

Time of meetings — Aug. 3, 4, 5, 1992. Speakers will be Dr. Dan Skow and Arden Anderson (both with much experience) and more. Ask for detailed paper for time of each speaker and directions to farm and our fertilizer and Speltz literature.

Shading Crucial To Cooling Greenhouses In Summertime

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Summer sunshine, needless to say, has a lot of energy. Using fans to cool the greenhouse during summer's "dog days" may not be enough.

Growers should consider using some type of shading, which can reduce fan use 30 percent or more.

"A lot of growers who use plastic houses don't use shading, and wonder why, even with the fans, they can't keep it cool," said William J. Roberts, chairman of the bioresource engineering department at Cook College. "There's just too much energy in the house coming in through the glazing to cool it."

Roberts spoke to about 16 members of the eight-week, ongoing 1992 Greenhouse Technology School at the Berks County Agricultural Center. Recently, Roberts spoke about the basics of heating and cooling greenhouses in part one of his series on the greenhouse environment. He also introduced the efforts of his department to gather enthusiasm and membership in a special ag/industry consortium to promote ag research in the face of crucial funding cuts in many universities in the country (see related story).

Save money

Fifty percent shading is popular with many growers who use greenhouses. For those considering building a greenhouse, growers can save money by using shading. Power to generate the fans can be reduced by about 30 percent.

The shading also acts, during the winter, as a heat cover at night. But during the summer, when outside air temperatures can soar to 105 degrees Fahrenheit or more, the inside air can top well over 115 degrees — much too unhealthful for plants or people.

According to Roberts, growers cannot cool without some type of shading in naturally ventilated houses (using louvers and allowing the temperature outside to regulate inside temperature). Also, natural ventilation is either wind-induced (through the flow of air currents) or temperature driven (by the difference of the temperatures inside and outside the greenhouse).

In the past, with many of the glass house technology borrowed from Holland, growers would shade using some type of white paint glazing. The shading would work well during the summer months, but growers counted on wind and rain to finally dissolve the paint by the wintertime, to allow more sun and thus more heating, and by wintertime, have a clean house. If the wind and rain didn't come, then, according to Roberts, "you got up there with hydrochloric acid and tried to get it off."

Removable screen

These days, especially with the PVC-sheeted houses, the best type of shading is a removable thermal screen. Growers can also save on heat energy in the winter and cooling energy in the summer.

Other ways to cool, not involving fans, is an excelsior-type material that holds water — what the industry calls a "swamp cooler" — that releases heat energy by air flow through the water. Also, foggers that release water droplets in the greenhouse will cool the air.

Naturally ventilated houses work well during the winter, fall, and early spring, but when you need them the most, said Roberts, in the summer, they won't work, because they rely on differences in temperature — if the outside air is 95 degrees F, and inside the greenhouse it is also 95 degrees, no cooling takes place.

"Some folks in New Jersey have built glass houses because the manufacturer says it will ventilate itself," he said. "It does not. It works beautiful the whole year, except when it gets very hot in the summer."

Design greenhouse

"If you're thinking about natural ventilation in a greenhouse, make sure the site will handle it," he said. "And take advantage of the prevailing winds during the hot time of the year to design your greenhouse to work that way."

Roberts said the roof louvers should be open to the leeward side of the wind, the direction toward which the wind is blowing. This way, the warmer air is "sucked out" of the greenhouse.

Ultimately, the best method of cooling allows the manager to regulate the air temperature using fans.

Fan cooling is determined by the change of air volume over one minute. To see how much air volume must be exchanged, growers need only to calculate the volume of the greenhouse. That number determines the cubic foot per minute, or CFM, needed in a fan.

Better flow rate

The CFM exchange can be reached by one fan or fans working in combination. But it is important to understand the design of a fan, and knowing exactly how to calculate how much static pressure, or air exchange capability, is in place. The tube axial fans with the larger hub provide better flow rate. Also, growers should consider multiple stage ventilation fans for maximum control.

"You are the best source of energy conservation," said Roberts. "You are the manager." Roberts said there are many ways to conserve energy and save money, even by growing a greenhouse crop that requires a 60-degree night temperature rather than 65 degree. Over the growing season, savings will add up.

Growers at the school included greenhouse managers, contractors, nurseries, and other green industry personnel. The school, which continues July 9, July 16, July 23, July 30, and ends August 6, will include other greenhouse-related topics, including integrated pest management, cultural techniques, product marketing and economics, and a field trip. The fee for the school is $100.

"We have some people from nurseries who are looking to either build their own greenhouses or to get a better handle on growing," said Shannen Ferry, multicounty horticulural agent who is coordinating the school.

Variety of things

"We all saw the need for a basic course just to either refresh people who were in the businesss or to help people who were new in the business or wanting to get started," she said. Ferry said although the course cannot cover everything three hours each time for eight weeks, "we touch on a variety of things and we have a notebook that is just crammed full of product information that we got from various vendors."

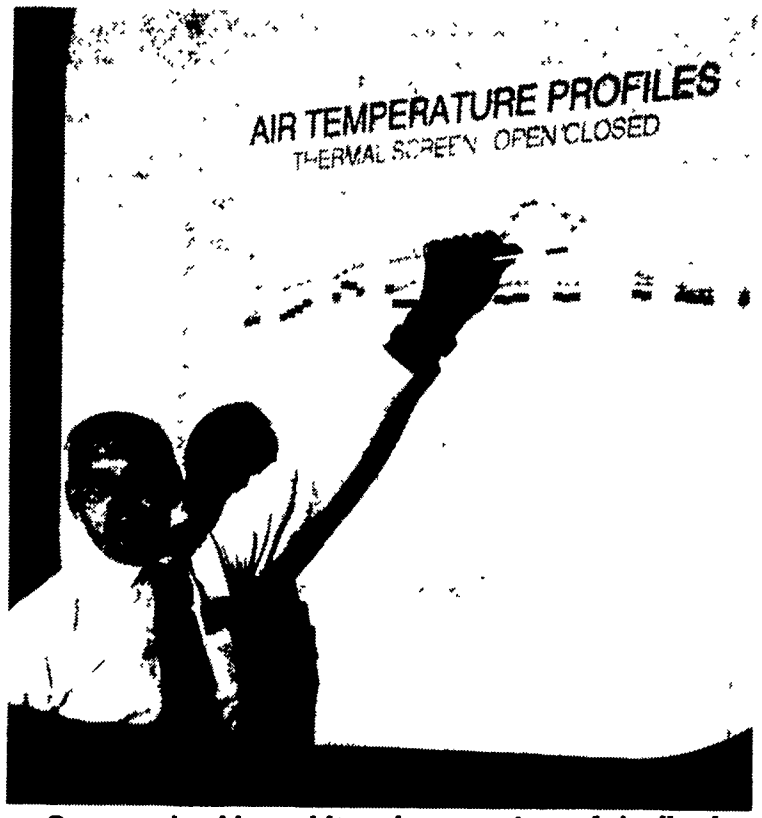
Ferry said that the course will also emphasize marketing, which many schools don't concentrate enough on.

Ferry said the extension offices in the region saw "a lot of greenhouses starting up as family businesses. And this is where we see a need for a school like this."

One grower at the school, Frank Murphy, together with wife Claire, operate Murphy's Corona Farm, which sells wholesale and retail vegetables and flowers in Dryville, Berks County. For years, according to Frank, they were growing their own vegetable plants and are beginning to market flowers.

Murphy has two greenhouses, one measuring 10 feet by 40 and the other a 10 feet by 20. They are considering building a bigger greenhouse, and are attending the school to learn more about what to look for.

"I saw some of the mistakes I made, but I figured if I came here I'd find out some more that I'd made," he said.



Growers should consider using some type of shading in greenhouses, which can reduce fan use 30 percent or more, according to William J. Roberts, chairman of the bioresource engineering department at Cook College. Roberts spoke at the 1992 Greenhouse Technology School at the Berks County Agricultural Center last week.

In Light Of Cutbacks, Colleges, Industry Pool Research Dollars

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. — "For some strange reason, I'm not sure why, agriculture has a very bad name among young people in the United States," said William J. Roberts, chairman of the bioresource engineering department at Cook College.

Recently, Roberts spoke about changes to the ag department at Cook College at the 1992 Greenhouse Technology School in Leesport, Pa.

And recently, according to the extension specialist in ag engineering, the college changed the name of the Ag and Biological Engineering Department to Bioresource Engineering.

Since the change, enrollment went from 15 students just three years ago to 90 now.

"I don't know whether the name did it, but that's all we changed," he said.

Roberts said that in the SAT tests that high school students take prior to college enrollment, out of 200,000 young people, only 11 indicated they were interested in pursuing a degree in agriculture. Of the 11, only one was interested in ag engineering.

Roberts said that, increasingly, colleges are cutting back funding for basic greenhouse technology research. As the research money dwindles, the industry continues to suffer.

While most of the available money goes to high tech, gene-splicing research, according to Roberts, the College is pursing other ways to raise money for basic research — mostly through a newly found ag consortium that brings together growers, research, and industry personnel.

The consortium, called Center for Controlled Environment Agriculture, is based on the Rutgers Center For Advanced Food Technology model, which has 20 members paying about $50,000 per year to pool the money for research. The model contains food industry representatives from many different companies.

The Cook College system is based on the Rutger's model. "Based on that model, we tried to create a similar setup for doing research that offers the kind of answers you folks are going to need, and your children," said Roberts.

Roberts said that for research to investigate how to put a growing system together, there is no available federal or state research money. But through the group, which charges grower representatives one cent per square foot (a minimum of $500 and maximum of $3,000), growers can find the answers.

And a grower can join the consortium as a satellite member for $50 per year.

Silo Falls, Hundreds Help

Farmer Gives Thanks

SOUTH LEBANON (Lebanon County) — Memorial Day weekend will be remembered by the Grant Krall family as the time when son Gary escaped with his life and hundreds of neighbors came to aid in bagging tons of haylage from a fallen silo.

It will be a remembered as a time for which to give thanks, according to Grant Krall.

According to Krall, on Saturday evening, Gary was atop the silo when grandson (Gary's nephew) Jacob Frazier came up to park the tractor and noticed chunks of concrete falling. Jacob yelled for Gary to come down off the 20-by-60 silo, filled with ryelage.

Within minutes of Gary getting down from the silo, it fell to the ground, away from the barns and other buildings, though it did crush a feed bin, a blower and fencing, according to a Lebanon newspaper report.

Insurance will not pay for any of the damage, since the 25-year-old, reinforced, poured-concrete structure fell on its own volition, without any natural act of nature influencing it, Krall said.

He said recently that he doesn't know how they will recover from the financial loss, but he said he is deeply thankful for the lives that were spared and for his supportive friends and acquaintances.

Known for having a tight-knit agricultural community, the Kralls' Lebanon County friends and neighbors showed up Sunday, Monday and Tuesday to help salvage the contents. As much feed as possible was bagged, after an overhead crane was brought in to help remove the large chunks of concrete and metal.

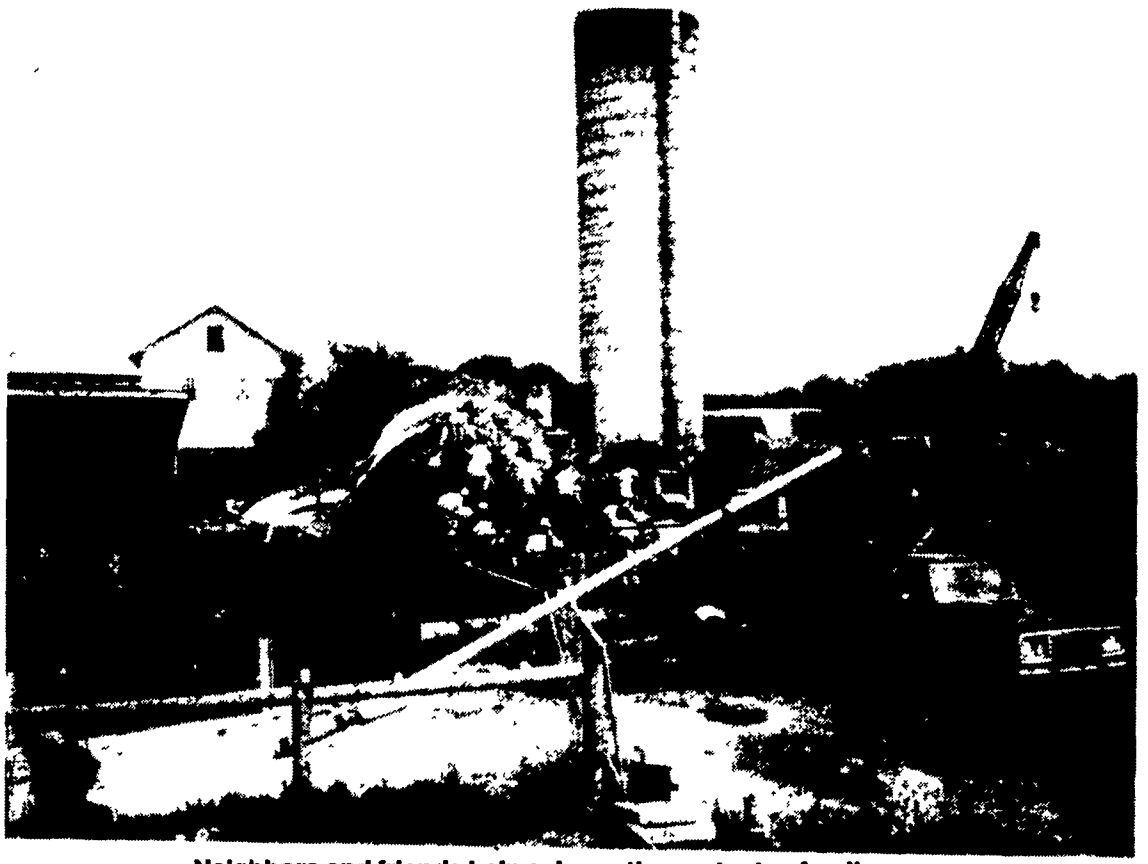
The disaster almost became more so, when, on that Sunday evening, Grant Krall was taken to an area hospital because of chest pains attributed to overwork and exhaustion, due to the cleanup. He was told to take it easier and returned home soon afterward to recover.

In their church newsletter, the Krall family wrote, "We wish to thank everyone for all that was done with our disaster . . . when the silo fell over.

"A special thank you to all the men who gave their time Sunday, Monday and Tuesday and for everyone who provided food, but especially for all the prayers. We are thankful that lives were spared.

"In Romans 8:28 we read, 'And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose.'

"We saw so much good from people working side-by-side and a real closeness of family."



Neighbors and friends help salvage the contents of a silo that fell down on the Grant Krall family farm in Lebanon County.

Association Reaches Record

CHAMBERSBURG (Adams Co.) — The Adams County Farmers' Association reached a record family membership of 868, according to an announcement by membership chairmen John Hess and Elmer Smith.

"We surpassed the old mark of 848 by 20 new members," reported President Dave Wenk, Gardners. The county group attained membership goal for the coming year. That figure established a record in number of members.

"The group's goal was to contact every farm family in the county for membership in the local association. We hoped to reach or surpass the goal by March. We are a few months back in our schedule, but we are at the finish line, which expresses to the farming community the need for continuing to educate and inform the county of the agricultural landscape within Adams County. People do care," said Hess.

FDA Will Ban Misleading Fat-Free Claims

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Over the past several years, the food and beverage industries have capitalized on consumers' desires for nutritious foods by promoting the health benefits of their products.

But federal regulations have restricted the dairy industry's efforts to stay equally competitive in the health claims arena by preventing percent fat-free claims from being made on milk labels.

"The dairy promotion industry has really had its hands tied on the percent fat-free issue since 1973," said Rick Naczi, executive vice president of American Dairy Association and Dairy Council in Syracuse.

"In fact, in 1986 we were part of a national effort to reverse the Federal Trade Commission's (FTC) ruling preventing, for example, labels on 4 percent milk from claiming '96 percent fat free.' Unfortunately, the FTC charged that fat-free claims were still misleading and denied the request."

Since the time that petition was made, the number of health claims on food labels has grown tremendously, as food and beverage companies have responded to consumers' increased focus on health.

Beginning in the mid-1980s with Kellogg's messages linking fiber to cancer prevention on its All-Bran cereal boxes, food companies were given free reign to make claims linking their products to health. Many of those claims included percent fat-free messages.

But because of the FTC ruling, the dairy promotion industry was unable to join in on making percent fat-free claims, creating what many in the dairy industry saw as a competitive disadvantage.

"For years, dairy farmers have been asking us why we don't promote milk in percent fat-free terms," said Naczi. "We would if we could, but the bottom line is, by law, we're not allowed."

It won't be too long before other food companies have similar restrictions.

At a nutrition conference in Washington, D.C. last June, David Kessler, the commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), announced his intentions to ban misleading fat percentage claims on food labels, calling them "marketing gimmicks," and pointing to their tendency to mislead consumers.

Kessler was quoted in The Wall Street Journal as saying, "The important information has nothing to do with how fat-free it is. The important information ... concerns the amount of fat per serving it contains."

Kessler pointed out that fat percentages should be calculated on the basis of calories, rather than weight.

Because of FDA's crackdown on health claims, Kraft General Foods Inc. agreed last year to eliminate fat percentage claims on its cottage cheese products. Other food companies have scaled back on their exaggerated claims, after FDA took action against several food companies for promoting misleading information on their products' labels.

Currently, FDA is joining efforts with the FTC to eliminate misleading food advertisements. A new food labeling system was proposed in November to help clarify information on food labels and stress factual nutrition information, such as the link between calcium and osteoporosis. New guidelines are expected in May 1993.

According to Naczi, the new labeling system will be positive for the dairy industry.

"The elimination of misleading fat percentage claims on food products will help level the playing field for dairy. And many dairy product labels will be able to highlight the link between dairy calcium and osteoporosis prevention.

"At least this will send a positive message to consumers, and one that dairy promotion groups can capitalize on."

FARM MANAGEMENT

LIVING WILLS AND ADVANCE DIRECTIVES

Alan W. Strock
Multicounty Farm Management Agent

Nineteen years ago, California became the first state to pass legislation protecting the rights of dying patients. That law gives Californians the right to make what is known as a living will.

When In Pennsylvania?

On April 16, 1992, living wills were legalized in Pennsylvania. Competent adults have a qualified right to control decisions relating to their own medical care. But this right is subject to society's interests in maintaining the medical profession's ethical standards and in preserving and protecting human life.

Creating a living will is an intensely personal decision that will reflect your religious convictions, financial status, and usually involve strong personal feelings that have grown out of health care experiences that friends and family have endured. Fortunately, failure to execute a living will doesn't necessarily reflect your feelings concerning life-sustaining measures.

What Is A Living Will And/or Advance Directives?

A living will allows you to designate that, if you become terminally ill and unable to communicate with doctors and family members, you do not want life artificially prolonged.

An advance directive, which may be part of your living will, provides specific direction to your physicians and medical care providers concerning your personal wishes for "life-sustaining treatment." If you become incapable of providing that direction personally, "life-sustaining treatment" is medical treatment that only serves to prolong the process of dying or that maintains a patient in a state of permanent unconsciousness. Examples of such treatment may include an artificial heart, cardiac resuscitation, mechanical respiration, kidney dialysis, tube feeding, or other artificial forms of nutrition, blood or blood products, or even antibiotics.

Requirements

A valid advance directive must meet three requirements:

First, the directive must be in writing, signed by the person or someone acting on his/her behalf.

Second, the individual must be emancipated. In other words the individual must be at least 18 years old, a high school graduate, or married.

Third, the directive must have been signed by two witnesses who are at least 18 years old. The directive doesn't need to be notarized.

Will You Be Asked?

It is federal law that health care providers must ask you if you have a living will as you enter a hospital. Most doctors and other health care providers are up to date concerning the legalities of living wills and are trained to fulfill the wished contained in the living will.

When Does It Take Effect?

First, the document must be made available to your doctor. Ideally this should have happened before the hour of need. After creating the living will the document should be shared with your doctors, family members, close friends and clergy. That way the people who are close to you are all aware of your desires and can see that they are ultimately fulfilled.

The advance directive becomes effective when you become permanently unconscious or in a terminal condition and incompetent. The attending physician must also arrange for a second opinion that would confirm your condition relating to being incompetent, in a terminal condition, or permanently unconscious. It is even a good idea to travel with a copy of your living will in the glove compartment of your car so that health care workers could be informed in case of an accident if traveling away from home.

If Refused

Because this is still a very controversial issue, some doctors or hospitals may refuse to follow your directions.

First, the doctor or hospital must inform the patient and family of their refusal to follow the living will.

Second, the doctor or hospital must assist in transferring the patient to another physician or hospital that will follow it.

How To Change It

As time passes, our beliefs often change concerning many of life's important decisions. You may be thinking this all sounds wonderful now, but what if you change your mind?

The advance directive may be revoked at any time and in any manner by the person making it without regard to your mental or physical condition. Revocation is effective when communicated to the attending physician or health care provider by you or a witness to the revocation.

For A Sample

If you want a sample copy of an advance directive for health care, call the Lancaster County Cooperative Extension at (717) 394-6851. This simple example form will aide your thinking process concerning this important decision.

We are all concerned about the rising cost of health care. These advance directives may be one step toward eliminating unwanted expenses, pain, worrying, and aggravation.

Researcher Says Food Processing Kings Make Pawns Of Farmers

QUEBEC CITY, CANADA — Giant commodity processing and marketing companies are becoming so large so fast that they threaten to monopolize the world's food supply, said a researcher from the University of Missouri/Columbia.

Dr. William Heffernan told attendees at the International Federation of Agricultural Producers General Conference that the entire food production of some countries today is already purchased by only one or two firms. Even in the United States, said Heffernan, the purchase of farm products is controlled by only a handful of cooperations.

Heffernan has been researching the implications of the trend in his work as a professor of rural sociology. "About three or four years ago, all of a sudden we were beginning to see this thing happen internationally," he said. Heffernan explained that companies including Cargill, ConAgra, Feruzzi, Mitsubishi, Tyson Foods, Grand Metropolitan, and Bunge have moved beyond the borders of any one nation to establish processing points.

That trend, he said, pits farmers of the world against each other in a competition based on "who will work cheapest" and supply products to the transnational corporations "at the lowest possible prices." That competition has served the corporations well, leading some to accomplish more than 20 percent return on investment.

But for farmers, the concentration trend means less competition among farm product buyers and lower returns.

Heffernan stated that the transnational corporations have so much power in the food sector that trade can no longer be thought of in terms of buying and selling among nations. "The TNC's have become the unit of analysis," he said.

"It's not just a major concern to farmers. It's a major concern to consumers and environmentalists as well," said Heffernan.

Farm leaders at the conference called the information "threatneing." U.S. National Farmers Union President Leland Swenson said that if the trend continues, national governments will no longer be able to have any influence over their own food policy.

"The transnationals will set the price at both the producer and consumer end, and determine what's produced and where it's produced," he said.

Three Bulls To Test

PLAIN CITY, Ohio — Three Pennsylvania Holstein bulls were recently chosen to enter testing in a sire sampling program of an artificial insemination cooperative.

All selections were based on outstanding pedigree, and selected as one of 185 Holstein bulls from throughout the United States to enter the program in 1992.

7H4307 Caernarvon Junction-ET*TL, a young sire bred by Andrew Stoltzfus of Morgantown, is a Leadman son from a "Very Good" (89) Ned Boy dam with over 26,500M, 1,120F, and 970P.

The "Excellent" (91-2E) Rotate grandam has a top record over 28,400M, 1,100F, and 920P and has earned her Gold Medal Dam and Dam of Merit designations.

7H4308 Russelldale RF Swiftwind*TL, a young sire acquired from James & Martin Younker of Fleetwood, is a Southwind son from three generations of "Very Good" or "Excellent" dams with more than 24,000M. Both the second and third dams are Gold Medal and Dam of Merit.

7H4287 Latuch Micheal Russell-ET*TL, a young sire bred by Latuch Brothers of Rockwood, is a Micheal son from a super cow family for fancy udders and high components. The "Very Good" (88) Enchantment dam completes three generations of Dams of Merit, with 3.4 percent protein, and "Excellent" mammaries.

All three entered the testing program operated by Select Sires, a business family of 12 farmer-owned and controlled A.I. cooperatives.

MILK CHECK

THOMAS JURCHAK
Dairy Specialist
Lackawanna County

SCRANTON (Lackawanna Co.) — There will be a new look for the Milk Market News that you will receive starting next month.

I will continue to write the Market Report on the front page but there will be three more pages of milk marketing news contributed by serveral different authors and edited by Dr. Robert Yonkers, extension ag economist, at Penn State University.

It will also include Class I prices for all three federal orders and six state orders in Pennsylvania as well as national dairy product prices; Commodity Credit Corporation prices and the Minnesota-Wisconsin Price Series.

The purpose, of course, is to give more information monthly to producers and handlers for the variety of milk markets in Pennsylvania and the northeast.

Contributors will be mainly ag economists from land grant universities and cooperatives as we start this new venture, but it may be expanded in the future. Your comments will be our guide.

Another reason is economy. We will combine the mailing lists now used for the Milk Market News and the Dairy Marketing Information letter now being mailed from Penn State.

Not Too Shabby

Twelve consecutive weeks of increases in block cheese prices at the National Cheese Exchange from March 13 to May 29 is not too shabby at anytime but in the spring it's outstanding.

We knew those increases couldn't go on forever but Friday, June 6 was the first time in three months we didn't get one.

That doesn't mean it's the end but just slowing down. In fact cheese prices went up again a quarter cent at the exchange on June 12 so we may have started another 12 weeks of increasing prices.

Let's wait and see while we adjust to lower fluid milk sales that come with school closings that divert more milk to manufacturing.

At $1.35 a pound there still weren't any sales at the Cheese Exchange and if cheese demand increases for summer picnics, or milk suppliers move to ice cream and other summer dairy products, you may see more increases.

Based on contracts being made with USDA for process cheese to be delivered in July, some forecasters are expecting cheese prices to go to $1.40 or more in the next two months.

Cheese sales have increased 8 percent in the first three months this year and processors may have to pay more to stay ahead of the demand. We may even match the record high price of $1.46 set in July 1990 but without the sudden drop to $1.08 that took only three months.

Blast Off

By now I hope you're anxious to learn what these cheese prices did to the Minnesota-Wisconsin Price Series that is the launching pad for the numbers on your milk check.

The M-W went into orbit, reflecting the cheese price increases of the recent past with a lift of 60 cents to $12.06 for May. That's also $1.83 more than a year ago.

In fact, except for the unusual marketing conditions in 1990, it's the highest M-W for May since the Milk Diversion Program in 1984. That cheese price of $1.35 on June 5 was 20 cents higher than it was in March. That 20 cents translates into $2 a hundred for milk.

The M-W in March was $10.98 and $12.06 in May for an increase $2.08 a hundred. Isn't dairy math interesting when prices are going up? And this is the same M-W that will be considered at hearings started June 15 when your milk check is on the line.

Like It Is

It wouldn't be fair to stop there and let you think that milk prices revolve only around cheese prices, but if you've been reading this newsletter for the 17 years I've been writing it you should have grasped the importance of dairy product prices in predicting your milk prices. Give me a 5 cent increase in cheese prices over a 5 percent increase in Class I utilization any day.

Helping to put the squeeze on milk supplies to cheese plants was an increasing demand for non fat dry milk and buttermilk.

From a low of 98 cents in February, prices were up to $1.19 by the end of May. That's still a long way from the $1.35 peak in June 1990, but then they had a world market price high enough to attract exports.

That was one of the major reasons for high milk prices in 1990 that we don't have now, but all of the other contributors are here. These include lower milk production in Wisconsin and Minnesota; a rising demand for cheese and powder and no Commodity Credit Corporation stocks to put on the market to hold prices down.

If we could get the GATT negotiators to negotiate we might even recapture that export market.

Disappointment

After all the good news about increases in cheese and powder prices it's going to be a let down to learn that the blend price for May in Order 2 at the 201-210 mile zone will be $12.36 for 3.5 percent butterfat milk. That's only nine cents more than last month but $1.52 more than last year.

Part of the reason is the delayed suspension in the Louisville Plan that didn't start until April. The 20-cent deduction made in March was paid back in April's milk, so last month your price was 20 cents higher than the market price. Without that you would have had a 29-cent increase for May.

The other reason is the lag between cheese and powder prices that increase the M-W price before you see it at the farm. The increase in the M-W comes first to the Class III price then Class II and finally, two months later, to the Class I price.

With the rapid increases in the M-W of 48 cents in April and 60 cents in May, the Class II price in June will be higher than your blend price in May. But hang in there. Bigger increases in the uniform or blend price are coming in June and July that may stay to the end of the year.

BFC

BFC stands for Basic Formula Price and that's the starting point for setting the Class prices for milk that handlers pay in all Federal Milk Marketing Orders and have nothing to do milk price supports.

Federal Orders are approved by producers to regulate handlers in a specific marketing area. Price supports are adopted by Congress to affect prices in all markets in the country.

Two different programs.

Right now, the M-W adjusted to 3.5 percent butter fat is the Basic Formula Price in all Federal Orders and has been since 1961.

Hearings started on June 15 to hear proposals on alternatives to the Basic Formula Price as it is determined now; not how it will be used in Federal Orders, but how it is determined.

You've read in the farm press for the last month the half dozen or more proposals that will be presented and know that most of them still center on using the M-W price but with some modifications.

Most of these changes are aimed at getting a more accurate price for milk sold to manufacturing plants to make butter, powder, cheese and condensary products. These are markets not regulated by Federal Orders and represent, as nearly as possible, the open market price for milk used in manufacturing dairy products.

It was a big change back in 1961 when the M-W was $3.27 but I don't think you'll see much difference this time. What you will have should be a more accurate reflection of open market prices, but not a big difference in your milk check.

Any changes will be important to you and if this change stays as long as the last one you'll have to live with it for 31 years.

Senate Environmental Committee Takes Action

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Legislation that bans the use of certain toxic chemicals in consumer packaging was approved by the Senate Environmental Resources and Energy Committee, according to committee chairman Sen. David J. "Chip" Brightbill, R-Palmyra.

Senate Bill 1733, sponsored by Sen. Mike Fisher (R-Allegheny) would prohibit the use of lead, mercury, cadmium and hexavalent chromium in any form of packaging within two years of the act's passage, or four years if replacements cannot be found immediately.

These toxic chemicals named in the bill can cause contamination when packaging is burned or landfilled.

Under the bill, DER may ban the use of additional substances by regulation after performing a risk assessment and consulting state, federal, and other groups with expertise in the area.

The department is to enforce the provisions of the act and would impose penalties of up to $10,000 per day for an initial violation.

The committee also approved House Bill 1530, sponsored by Rep. Sara Steelman (D-Indiana), which establishes an agricultural advisory board to give the Department of Environmental Resources advice on environmental programs affecting agriculture.

The legislation creates a permanent 13-member board made up of active farmers, farm organizations and related state and federal agencies. Majority and minority chairmen of the Senate and House Agriculture and Rural Affairs committee would serve as ex officio members.

Duties of the board would include giving general advice to DER on farming practices, providing comments to the secretary on department policies and regulations prior to promulgation, and providing comments on existing department policies.

The committee amended the bill to provide a more specific procedure for the board to use in reviewing DER regulations.

Pricing Milk, Selecting Alternatives

NEWARK, Del. — June is Dairy Month and an appropriate time to reflect on the price of milk. What is the right price, and when and where? Let's consider the three major aspects of pricing milk.

The first is the market rule of supply and demand. When the price decreases, consumer demand increases; when the retail price goes up, demand goes down and the consumer shifts to alternative products. As the percentage of fluid milk in the total milk market slides, so do the milk producers' incomes, since fluid milk accounts for the largest portion of profit—more than selling milk for use in making cheese, yogurt, powdered milk, ice cream and other dairy products.

However, the supply and demand market rule is true for milk only in general terms. Milk sales are less "elastic" than sales of other goods. Recently in Michigan, I saw an interesting example of lower-price marketing of milk. Store milk in plastic half-gallon bags is sold there for half the price that milk in gallon jugs sells for here.

Price wars to stimulate sales, like the recent one among major airlines, are undertaken on saleable goods other than milk. Should dairy farmers feel frustrated about this lack of promotional strategies for milk, the product they depend on for their livelihoods?

Milk is different from all other store goods in that it is considered a necessity to consumers.

Since there are few alternatives, generally consumers will buy it regardless of the price. Such confidence embodies an enormous, incomparable trust by the buying public into the contents and quality of milk. This is reflected in such promotional slogans as "real milk" or "milk all natural," indicating nothing is added to it.

Store policy often takes advantage of this necessity for milk and inelastic demand by placing the dairy case at the far corner of the store so that consumers purchasing milk have to go through the store to get it.

This generates sales of other goods which the store otherwise may not have realized had the dairy case been in front of the store.

Why, then, do dairy processors sell fruit juices in addition to milk with the claim to make more money? And why do dairy farmers usually receive relatively less money for milk than they have to pay out for tractors and other farm supplies?

The answer is complicated by certain market policies, often polemicized by such slogans as "milk is a bargain" for consumers.

The second aspect of milk pricing is that it makes sense to pay more for greater quality and nutritional contents. If milk is a bargain, it is on the basis of the nutritional contents of protein, calcium, solids and energy in comparison with other foods.

After years of debate, efforts by dairy farmers and marketing organizations have finally succeeded in establishing a pricing system based on per pound of solids or protein.

This turn of events gives the dairy farmer new opportunities and incentives for producing better quality and more contents. It also assures consumers of better nutritional values for their money and new potentials including low cholesterol, high unsaturated fats and low sodium.

The third aspect of milk pricing is that, regardless of demand forces and content differences and despite variations in efficiencies of dairy farmers in different regions, there is a cost involved in producing milk.

If we look at family farmers, the cost of labor in producing milk can be variable, flexible or certainly not tied to minimum labor demands as in larger, commercial dairy enterprises.

For some people, this represents the strength of the family farm, but to others it simply means operating at a loss and being underpaid. Sooner or later this will lead to closing the farm gates or getting into alternatives.

What might they be?

In terms of milk, it can be milking goats or sheep instead of cows, as they do in some other countries, such as France, Italy, Spain, Greece and Norway, where they have economic importance. Why not in the Unites States?

There are few milking sheep in the United States, but about one million dairy goats producing about 600,000 tons of milk per year, the money equivalent of which is $750 million.

There are even goat herds on US DHIA record keeping with a national average of 1,980 pounds of milk in 305 days per goat for close to 16,000 animals.

Why then do we hardly ever see goat's milk on shelves in grocery stores?

I think it is primarily because of the three aspects of milk pricing: not No. 1 — demand seems to exceed supply; not No. 2 — contents are comparable to cow milk; but No. 3 — the relation of production cost to retail price.

Several research studies in recent years established that it takes much more time and labor to

NAVIGATOR II

STRESS-FREE ROW CROP GUIDANCE

- Unique design keeps the implement parallel with the rows even when the tractor moves laterally as it drifts off course. Most other systems oversteer the toolbar which adds damaging side pressure to the stabilizing coulters.
- Automatically compensates for sidehill drift.
- Eliminates excessive pull and stress on hydraulic components associated with other guidance systems.
- Very few moving parts provide smooth, friction-free lateral movement.
- Works effectively on all conventional and ridge-till cultivators, planters and 4-wheel drive articulated tractors.

Dairy Cattle Immigrate

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Dairy cattle arrived in America as early as 1525, bringing with them nutritious dairy goodness and more.

Back then, dairy cows were milked by hand, with every home having their own dairy cow.

With modernization and the introduction of refrigeration, families did not have to milk their own animals everyday, but could purchase milk from vendors at the town market. This evolved into home delivery service for milk along with dairy farms that housed and cared for greater numbers of cattle.

Today, the average dairy farm in Pennsylvania has 53 cows and most consumers purchase milk at a convenience store or larger grocer.

Pricing Milk

produce 100 pounds of goat's milk than 100 pounds of cow's milk.

Specifically, it takes 26 to 70 minutes just to do the milking of goats; milking cows takes 3 to 14 minutes per 100 pounds milk.

If labor is $6 per hour, this would mean a $7 labor cost in 100 pounds of goat's milk versus $1.40 for cow's milk, which does not take into account other costs, including feeds, equipment, buildings, insurance and veterinary expenses.

With this in mind, goat's milk should fetch a marketplace price of at least three times that of cow's milk just to keep the farmer in business. And given the limited producing ability of dairy sheep, their milk would have to be priced at least four to five times that of cow's milk.

We probably will not see sheep's and goat's milk in stores any time soon, unless there is another reason to buy it.

The nutritional value of goat's milk and sheep's milk is appreciated in other countries from which the Unites States imports, especially in the form of connoisseur cheeses.

Roquefort, Pecorino, Feta, Gjetost, Kefalotiri, Chevre and Manchego are cheeses made from the milk of goats and sheep, but at prices in line with the higher production costs associated with milking these small dairy animals.

This then could be a new incentive to U.S. dairy farmers to try such marketplace alternatives. Some producers have already done so with considerable success.

4-H Horse Club Members Can Win Arabian Gelding

SCHWENKSVILLE (Montgomery Co.) — Members of Pennsylvania 4-H horse clubs have the opportunity to try to win one of the purebred Arabian geldings that the Pennsylvania Arabian Horse Association will give to the winning entrants of the Gelding Merit Award Program.

During the past 10 years, the Pennsylvania Arabian Horse Association (PAHA) has awarded 15 young purebred Arabian geldings to Pennsylvania 4-H members through the Merit Award program. This program is coordinated by John Massaro, Pennsylvania Arabian Horse Association, and Pat Comerford, extension horse program coordinator at Penn State University. Three geldings were awarded in 1991, and if entries warrant, three more will be awarded this year at the State 4-H Show in October.

Entery forms and the award requirements have been sent to all 4-H county agents. Local 4-H Club leaders should have the entry forms for any member interested in applying.

To compete for the geldings, the youth must be between the ages of 12 and 16, have completed a 4-H novice horse project, and agree to use their new gelding as a 4-H production project.

Two short essays are required: "Why I Want to Own an Arabian Horse" and "What the Arbian Horse Means to Me." These must be submitted by July 15 to the Pennsylvania Arabian Association for judging.

A panel of PAHA members familiar with 4-H youth and Arabian horses will review all entries. The 4-H member with the highest score will win their choice of the geldings to be awarded.

Winners are awarded youth memberships in the Pennsylvania Arabian Horse Association. Through these awards, PAHA hopes to encourage more youth to participate in 4-H using Arabian horses.

Even if a 4-H member has entered unsuccessfully in previous years, the are encouraged to try again. Any 4-H member wanting more information on this program may contact John Massaro, 461 Township Line Road, Schwenksville, PA 19473, (215)287-7543.

Court Rules Regulators Must Pay

president Dean Kleckner said the ruling is, "a clear-cut victory for all Americans, including America's farmers and ranchers. Agricultural producers have been as subject as anyone to restrictive regulations that impact property rights. There is a lot stake when regulations reduce or eliminate our ability to provide food and fiber for this nation.

Eckel added, "In the future, regulators will have to be very careful about what they decide is in the public's best interest. If they decide to restrict property rights with regulations, they'll also have to figure out how to pay for it. The court said there is nothing wrong in taking private property for the public good, as long as the public pays the cost, not the private landowner. Public taking of land must be at the public's cost."

The Supreme Court case stemmed from regulations imposed by South Carolina that rendered worthless two lots purchased by Lucas, who had planned to build a home for his family on one and sell the other. Before he could do either, the state enacted the Beachfront Management Act which left Lucas' plans, and a sizable investment, in ruin.

Lucas went to court and was awarded $1.23 million but that ruling was overtuned when the coastal agency appealed the case to the state Supreme Court. In its friend of the court brief to the U.S. Supreme Court, Farm Bureau argued that the Constitution's "taking clause" requires the government to pay property owners when the value of their land is destroyed or reduced by regulations that limit the ways land can be used.

"Just as owners receive compensation when their property is taken through eminent domain, now compensation will be mandated when private property is taken through regulatory action," Kleckner said of the high court decision. "Whether a farmer loses his field to a new highway or to restrictive wetlands regulations, we believe the result is the same in each case -- a taking is a taking. When compensation is not paid, the landowner's constitutional rights have been violated."

"PFA and American Farm Bureau spent an enormous amount of resources to defend against this attack on property rights," Eckel said, "We have won a very major battle, but the war will wage on. We need to remain forthright in our defense of the constitutional guarantee of property rights."

According to American Farm Bureau, the ruling strengthens language in the U.S. Constitution's Fifth Amendment which states that private property shall not be taken for public use without "just compensation." Said Eckel, "It's a great victory for agriculture which owns millions of acres of land and depends on that land as a prime source for its wealth and well-being."

Farmers have been subjected to government regulations that diminish the land's value and the ability of the farmer to use it productively. "Wetlands regulations are one example of how the use of our private land resources are being restricted," said Kleckner, "Incomes have been reduced. In some cases, the value of land has plummeted at the stroke of a regulator's pen, leaving a farmer without the resources necessary to earn a living, and without the assets earned over a lifetime.

"The bottom line in this case is that if the public benefits from the regulation of private property, then the public, not just the individual landowner, must pay the price."

"The court's action is also a plus for the environment," Eckel added, "Because private property rights encourage good stewardship of the land. Environmentalists can be pleased with the ruling because private property owners have proven to be the best caretakers of the land.

Ida Risser: A Woman Who Gets Things Done

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEOLA (Lancaster Co.) — For 22 years, Ida Risser has been writing the column "Ida's Notebook" for Lancaster Farming, which offers glimpses into the life of a busy woman. Many avid readers believe Ida has become like a family member although they have never met her in person.

Several readers requested a feature story on Ida and pictures showing her home, garden, and the family farm to which she often refers in her column.

A lifetime of accomplishments confirm the words that Ida uses to describe herself: "I just take the bull by the horn and get things accomplished."

That was how her column became a regular feature in this newspaper.

In 1970, the newspaper did not carry features for women and the home so Ida wrote to the editor and suggested that the paper include something for women.

In response, the editor asked a home economist to write a weekly column, but Ida wasn't satisfied.

She wrote again and said that she would like to read about the day-to-day life of a woman. As an example, she included several paragraphs about her own life.

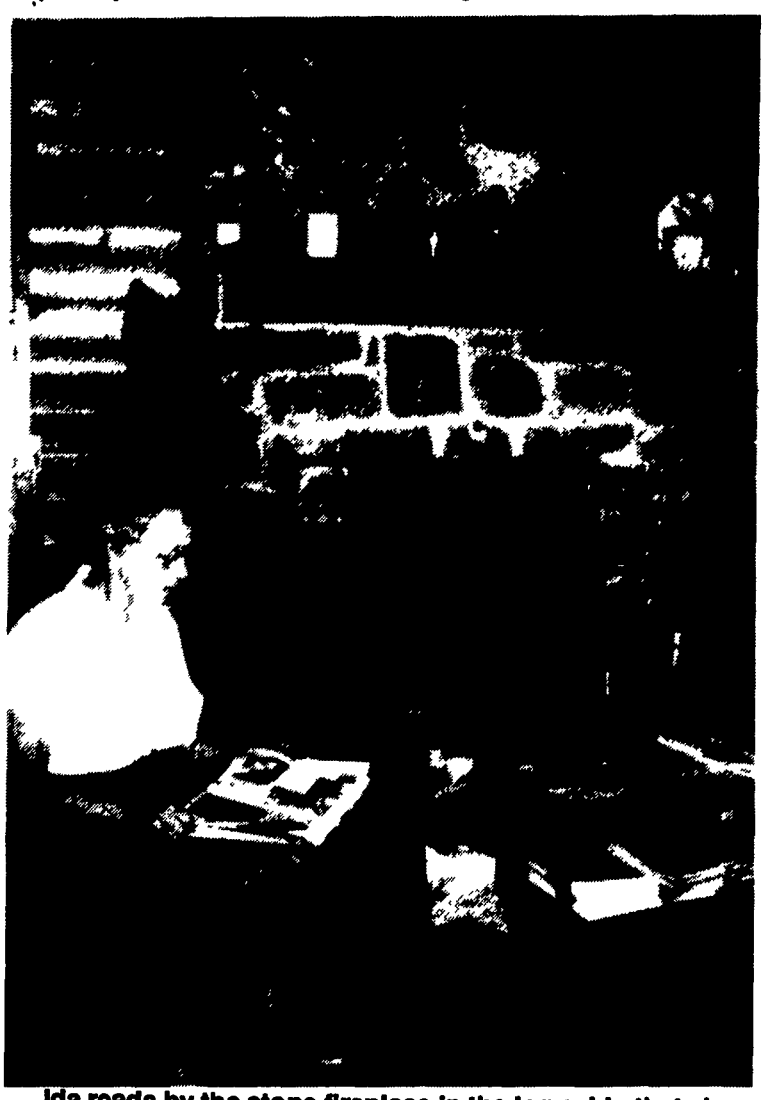
Within days, the editor convinced Ida that she should write the column, and she has been doing it ever since.

"With six children living on the farm, being a church deacon, vice president of the PTA, a 4-H leader, and transporting her children back and forth between 4-H meetings and school activities," Ida said, she never worried about needing something to write about when she first began her column. Ida recalls of those years when the children all lived at home, that she used to say, "When I drive up the lane, I meet myself coming back."

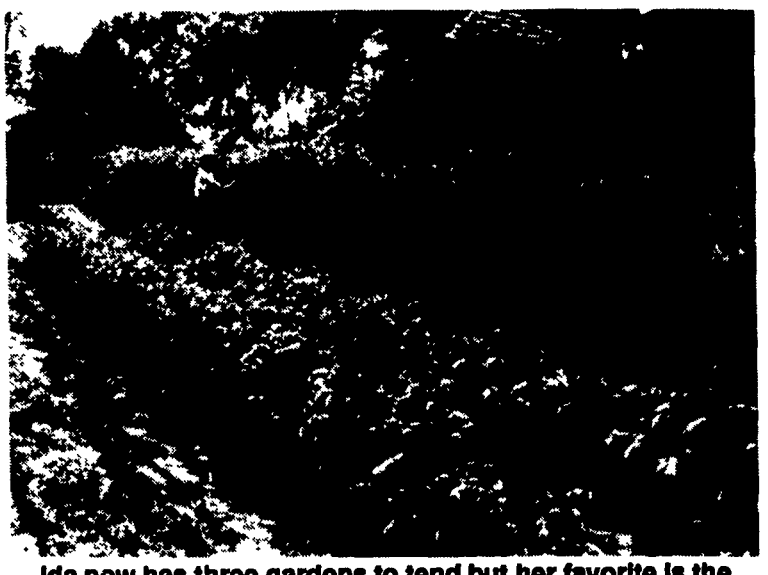
She continues to have many things to write about as she and her husband adjust to retirement, make the transition from farm to new home, and keep in touch with their six children and 10 grandchildren scattered across the country.

One of Ida's most enjoyable tasks is working in one of their three gardens. Her extensive gardening includes 20 different kinds of vegetables and fruits such as peanuts, tea, edible soybeans, strawberries, raspberries, nutmeg melons, and Baby Dumpling edible squash.

The Rissers enjoy their rocking chairs on the front porch that overlooks cows grazing in the meadow.



Ida reads by the stone fireplace in the log cabin that she and husband designed.



Ida now has three gardens to tend but her favorite is the one located behind the smokehouse on the family farm. The dirt is loose and fine without a stone. The sugar peas that Ida is picking are grown from seed passed down through the generations.

Every year, she saves seed from each vegetable grown. Two varieties of her seeds, which have been passed down through the Risser generations, appear in Landis Valley's Heirloom Seed Catalogue. The seeds are called the Risser Sickle Pea and The Risser Early Sugar Pea.

She cans and freezes the produce, which greatly lowers grocery bills. In fact, her weekly grocery bill does not exceed $20, since she fills two freezers and two refrigerators with the produce from her garden and with beef and pork, which is raised on the farm.

For those who have been long-term readers of Ida, they know that the Rissers moved from the family farm last year into a log cabin, which was built in the farm's meadow. Their youngest son Philip and his wife Lisa continue the dairy operation.

The Rissers spent a winter redrawing plans for their log cabin. They decided on a kitchen that opens into a family room with a stone fireplace that extends to the eaves. Some of the beams in the family room are from the tobacco shed on their farm. Windows off the family room and bedrooms face a hillside planted with wildflowers. A bay window in the living room overlooks the woods and a portion of the Conestoga River. Windows in the dining room, living room, and kitchen open into a porch that overlooks the meadow where the heifers graze.

The Rissers have spent weeks transplanting flowers and shrubs, which they have accumulated after a lifetime of living on the farm.

Ida has an extensive photo collection of her descendants and family, with which she keeps an historical account. Genealogy has been her greatest interest, and recently she was delighted to find that she is the ninth generation of Hans Michael Weidler, who first owned the family farm. However, for about two decades the farm did not remain in the family, until her mother purchased the farm in 1930.

With Ida's fascination of genealogy is a love for heirloom furniture that she worked hard to find space for in their newly-built home. Some of her favorites are a 1700 Grandfather's Clock, 1813 Dutch cupboard filled with Shreiner dishes on one side and Risser dishes on the other, a framed 1734 draught (draft) of the farm, and a 1873 bedroom suit that was made for her grandfather.

The Risser farmhouse features a walk-in fireplace with a squirrel tail bake oven.

Ida grew up as the eldest in a family of seven girls. "As a child, I couldn't get involved in anything off the farm or go to college because I was needed to work at home," Ida said.

After Ida was graduated from high school and was hoeing tobac-

Homestead Notes

After months of hardwork planting and transplanting, the Rissers have Wildflowers, perennials, and annuals blooming profusely around their log cabin.

Check Clouds With A Mirror

Have you ever watched the clouds go sailing by? Do clouds move? How can you find out if this is so?

Wait for a warm sunny day with clouds in the sky. You need a mirror with a border, about 10 by 8 inches. Put your mirror on the ground. Look at the cloud that is showing (being reflected) in your mirror. You should be able to see slight movement.

Why can I tell that the cloud is moving by looking in the mirror? You are able to see slight motion in the clouds in your mirror. The reason is because you have an edge or background that is not moving and you can watch the cloud move off your mirror.

If you look up at the clouds, it is easy for the eye to move with the clouds. Often you are not sure that they are moving. There is usually some air or wind in the clouds. This will cause them to move.

Ida Risser

co in the field with her father one day, she was shocked when he if she wanted to enroll in a two-year course at a business college. Although her desire was to be a teacher, Ida accepted her dad's offer to attend business college. After graduation from it she worked at the Farm Bureau for eight years as a bookkeeper.

"My first paycheck was $15 weekly," Ida said.

"I was the first female employed by Farm Bureau and I learned to do many things by listening to the men."

This included teaching herself to hunt and fish so that she could brag to her male co-workers, "I shot three squirrels last night."

She became a member of Rural Youth of Lancaster County, sponsored by Penn State Extension. Through Rural Youth, she met her husband-to-be, Allen Risser, who had studied two years of agronomy at Penn State.

The couple moved on Ida's family farm. The first year, which was in 1949, as they were putting loose dry hay in the barn, the dust exploded and burned down the early 1800's barn.

Ida's photographs show a progression of events. There's the 1972 flood spurred by Hurricane Agnes. The river flooded the area and reached the Rissers' front porch. Five feet of water filled the basement and big fish swam around the house, but the water did not come in the main floor although many hours were spent carrying the furniture to the second floor.

For almost 50 years, the Ida and Allen have been members of the square dancing group called the Foot and Fiddle.

Ida has held many positions at Highland Presbyterian Church, where she has led the Women's Bible Study and is on a committee to plan social activities.

She is a director for the Farm and Home Foundation Board, and a former secretary for the Extension Board for 15 years.

Of all her involvement in community, church, and homemaking, Ida said, "The children brought me the most satisfaction in that they turned out well. All of the Rissers six children are college graduates and include Nancy, a nurse practitioner in New Jersey; Kenneth, manager of an egg processing plant in Virginia; Jeffrey, who has a doctor's degree but is taking a leave to be a house parent for his two children in Georgia; Judy, former manager of new product development for Hershey Foods and now a homemaker in Georgia; Philip, who farms the family farm; and Cindy, an industrial engineer in Tunkhannock who is to be married in September.

Ida believes in doing a job that needs to be done even if she doesn't enjoy it. She said that she does not like cleaning house, but does every room weekly. "When the children were growing up, it was wonderful to come downstairs on a Sunday morning and see the children scrubbed and every room clean."

In her sparetime, she bakes, reads, and braids rugs. "Most of all I like to keep busy," she said.

Ida has traveled to Europe three times, crossed the United States two times, taken a Carribean cruise, and visited Alaska and Hawaii.

"One of the nicest thing is all the letters I get from people who respond to something I wrote in Lancaster Farming," Ida said. "I'm amazed how far the paper travels and how often I meet someone from another state who recognizes my name from the paper."

Ida also writes a column called "From Farm to Kitchen" for the Intercourse News. Each column includes a recipe. Here is one of her recipes.

Ice Cream Churn-Off Slated For Ag Progress

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Pennsylvania's dairy promotion partners will again sponsor an Ice Cream Churn-Off at Penn State's annual Ag Progress Days. This annual event will be held on Wednesday, August 19, beginning at 1 p.m., at the dairy promotion booth, at the corner of Main Street and West 8th Street, of the Rock Springs grounds.

The first eligible entries received for the contest will be competing in the Churn-Off to win a top prize of $300. Additional awards of $150 and $100, will be awarded, respectively, to the second and third place finishers. Following the official judging of the contest, all eight entries will be available for on-lookers to sample and judge for themselves.

The Churn-Off and other dairy promotion activities at Ag Progress Days are collectively sponsored by Pennsylvania's Dairy Promotion Partners, the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Mid East United Dairy Industry Association/Federal Order 36 Advertising Agency, and the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program.

To enter the contest, individuals must place their name, address, telephone number, and complete written copy of the recipe entered, on a piece of paper and mail to: Ice Cream Recipe Contest, Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, 2301 N. Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA, 17110. Recipes should include all ingredients, preparation instructions, and the amount of ice cream made by the recipe.

Recipes must be postmarked by July 31, to be eligible for the contest. All recipes must use Real dairy products. For the contest, each entry should be prepared ahead of time, so that the recipe will be ready for churning at the contest. No preparation facilities will be available at the site, but electricity, rock salt, and ice will be available for the contest.

The contest is open to all Pennsylvania residents except those with a professional food status. This offer is limited to one entry per family, 4-H group, FFA Chapter, or other organization. Teams are limited to no more than four members. All recipes must not have been previously published or won an award. Contest recipes become the property of the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program. The judges decision will be final.

Along with the Churn-Off, the dairy promotion partners will have displays about promotion activities, a register-to-win drawing, and an antique ice cream churner display. Ag Progress Day will be located at the Penn State Research Center, at Rock Springs, just outside of State College, on Route 45 East.

Further information about the contest and complete contest rules are available by calling the PDPP at (717)787-6903.

Take A Family Walk, Talk

Walking may be a perfect family activity if it is taken not for speed but for investigation and conversation. Since young children are physically shorter and many times more observant than older children, they will see more bugs, different leaves, and surprises when you roll over a log or look under an object.

As children begin to learn their colors, go on a color walk. One day may be Red Walk Day and another Green Walk Day. Counting items can be fun too. Look for items that can be seen together, but look for them in numerical order — one mailbox, two stoplights, three telephone poles. Alphabet walks can help chilren learn the sounds of the letters. Hunt for things that start with A and then B and so on.

Walking is not only enjoyable, but it can be beneficial to physical, educational and family health. Happy walking.

Local Blueberries Are Ready to Enjoy

The cultivated blueberry in Pennsylvania is indigenous to North America, however it was not until the 1930's that its value as a commerical fruit was realized. Using taller plants that produced larger, sweeter, and juicer fruits, scientists developed hybird varieties that could be harvested mechanically at a resonable cost.

Blueberry season is only five months long, from May until September. The first berries come from northern Florida and Georgia. As the season progresses, large supplies are available from North Carolina. In June, the large New Jersey crop is harvested. Pennsylvania blueberries are available during the month of July followed by berries from other northeastern states.

Select ripe blueberries since unripe berries do not become sweeter after they are picked. Look for light-blue berries that have a powdery look (called bloom), which is a sign of freshness. This bloom is a natural protective wax covering that protects the berries from the sun. It cannot be rinsed off but fades as the berries age. Red or green are not ripe and have a sour flavor.

Blueberries should be refrigerated immediately after harvest. Decayed or moldy blueberries should be removed before the blueberries are refrigerated. Do not wash blueberrries before storing because moisture allows mold to grow. Instead, wash blueberries just prior to using. Store berries in a container with a loose cover. Depending upon the freshness of the berries, they can be stored in the refrigerator for 2 days to 1 week.

Blueberries are low in calories. One cup blueberries, unsweetened, contains 82 calories. They contain no sodium or cholesterol and are very low in fat. They are good source of dietary fiber, Vitamin C and contain some potassium.

To freeze blueberries, remove any decayed or moldy blueberries, place berries in a heavy-duty plastic freezer bag or container and seal tightly. When stored at 0 degrees F, they will keep up to one year. There is no need to wash the berries before freezing; rinsing them just before using will thaw as well as clean them.

Blueberries seem to lend themselves to old-fashioned desserts, such as compotes, crisps, and cakes. They also combine well with other fruits and add a seasonal touch to everyday salads.

Fresh Blueberrry Sauce

2 cups blueberries
1/3 cup granulated sugar
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon vanilla

Wash blueberries and crush in saucepan. Add sugar and lemon juice. Mix well. Bring to a boil and boil 1 minute stirring constantly. Add vanilla. Chill. Serve over puddings, cakes, waffles, pancakes, or ice cream. Makes 1-1/2 cups.

Blueberry Muffins

1 1/4 cup all-purpose flour
3/4 cup whole wheat flour
3 tablespoon brown sugar
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 egg
1/4 cup vegetable oil
1 cup milk
1 cup blueberries
2 tablespoons granulated sugar

Mix together flour, brown sugar, and baking powder in a large bowl. In small bowl beat together egg, vegetable oil and milk. Add all at once to flour mixture and stir until just moist. Fold in blueberries. Spoon into greased or paper-lined, 2 3/4 inch muffin cups and sprinkle with granulated sugar. Bake at 425 degrees F. for 20 to 25 minutes or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Serve warm. Makes 12 muffins.

Stain-Resistant Carpet

When purchasing a new stain-resistant carpet be sure to get information on how to clean them. Use of regular rug shampoos and spot cleaners is generally not recommended on the many brands of carpeting with stain-resistant finishes. Blotting with warm water is suggested by some authorities as the safest method to remove spills and stains.

Persistent stains require stronger measures, but the smart consumer will check the manufacturer's specific recommendations before attempting either home or professional remedies. Use of cleaning chemicals not mentioned in the cleaning guides may nullify carpet warranties. General guidelines for cleaning start-resistant carpets are:

- Clean spots quickly with warm water. Stain resisters allow for a slower clean-up but quick action is still the best policy.
- Follow the manufacturer's instructions for stubborn stains.
- Don't use a detergent with a pH level greater than 10.
- Don't use water temperature greater than 150 degrees F.
- Don't apply any topical treatments such as biocides, fungicides, or soil-resisters that are not specially approved by the warrantor.

School is out and that means kids are home and looking for snacks. Debra Bryant, Penn State Extension agent, encourages you to make those snacks healthy and delicious by using fresh fruits. She suggests the following recipes from Sunkist Growers, Inc.

ORANGE YOGURT DIP FOR FRESH FRUIT

8 ounces lowfat plain yogurt
2 tablespoons honey
Grated peel of ½ orange
2 oranges, peeled, segmented
1 medium apple, unpeeled, sliced*
1 medium banana, peeled, chunked*

In small bowl, combine yogurt, honey, and orange peel. Serve as a dip with oranges, apple, and banana. Makes four servings.

*Sprinkle cut apple and banana with a small amount of orange or lemon juice to prevent fruit from darkening.

Serving this dip in a small hollowed out orange shells can be especially fun for children.

To serve in orange shells, cut oranges in half crosswise in middle of each orange. Ream juice from both halves. Scrape shells clean with spoon. Cut a small slice off bottom of shells so oranges sit flat. Fill as desired. Shells can be made and frozen ahead, to be used at a later date. Save juice for drinking or use in recipes.

JUST FOR KIDS FRUIT POPS

1½ cups orange juice
6 ounces apple, grape, or pineapple juice
6 3-ounce paper cups
6 plastic spoons or wooden sticks

Combine juices and pour into paper cups. Freeze until almost firm, 30 to 45 minutes. For handles, insert spoons or sticks in upright position. Freeze until firm. To serve, allow pops to stand at room temperature for a few minutes and remove from cups. Makes 6 pops. No sugar added! The natural sweetness of fruit juices makes these pops a favorite with kids.

"Microwave Magic"

By:
Carol Stark

We've already begun to harvest vegetables from the garden. The microwave cooks them nutritionally, as well as keeps the color of the vegetables in tact. In this era of microwaves, cooking vegetables is clean, cool, safe, convenient, time and work saving. Microwaving has become part of today's lifestyle.

Let's start with a vegetable that seems to come usually in abundance, the green bell pepper. Kids usually don't like the green pepper itself, but it makes a nice shell for stuffing. Usually the kids like that part of it.

PEPPERS - GREEN BELL

To prepare: wash the green peppers; remove stems, seeds and membranes. Leave whole or cut into thin slices.

To microwave: Place peppers in 1 1/2 quart casserole. Cover tightly and microwave on high (100 percent) 2 minutes; stir. Cover and microwave until crisp-tender, 2 to 3 minutes longer. Let stand 1 minute.

To serve: Add margarine or butter, salt and pepper... combine with tomatoes or cooked mushrooms.

RICE STUFFED PEPPERS

4 medium green peppers
2 cups chopped tomato
⅔ cup uncooked instant rice
½ cup chopped onion
¼ cup raisins
¼ cup snipped parsley
2 tablespoons sunflower kernels
2 tablespoons margarine or butter
¾ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon curry powder
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ cup water

1. Cut thin slice from stem end of each pepper. Remove seeds and membranes; rinse. Arrange peppers in circle in 9 or 10 inch pie plates.

2. Mix remaining ingredients except water. Fill each pepper with ⅔ cup mixture. Spoon 2 tablespoons water into each pepper.

3. Cover loosely and microwave 6 minutes on high (100 percent); rotate pie plate 1/2 turn. Microwave until peppers are crisp tender, 4 to 5 minutes longer.

PEPPERS AND CORN IN TOMATO SAUCE

1 medium green pepper, cut into 1/2 inch strips
1 cup ¼ inch diagonal slices celery
¼ cup finely chopped onion
1 can (7 ounces) whole kernel corn, drained
½ teaspoon dried basil leaves
½ teaspoon salt
1 can (8 ounces) tomato sauce
garlic croutons

Mix all ingredients except garlic croutons in 1 1/2 quart casserole. Cover tightly and microwave on high (100 percent) 5 minutes; stir. Cover and microwave until green peppers are tender, 5 to 7 minutes longer. Sprinkle with garlic croutons.

GARLIC CROUTONS

Mix 2 tablespoons margarine or butter, 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder and 1 cup toasted bread cubes. Microwave uncovered on high (100 percent) until crisp and dry, stirring every minute, 1 to 2 minutes.

CORN ON THE COB

To prepare: Refrigerate unhusked corn until ready to use. (Corn is best when eaten as soon after picking as possible.) Husk 4 ears corn and remove silk just before cooking.

To microwave: Wrap each ear of corn in waxed paper; twist ends. Arrange 2 inches apart in the microwave. Microwave on high (100 percent) 5 minutes; turn corn over and rearrange ears. Microwave until tender, 4 to 6 minutes longer. Let stand 3 minutes.

Note: Corn can be microwaved in the husk, if desired. After microwaving, grasp silk and gently pull off before removing husks.

To serve: Add margarine or butter, salt and pepper... season with chili powder, basil, celery seed or nutmeg... cut off kernels and stir in chopped green pepper, chilies or celery.

CHEESY CUCUMBER AND CORN

1 medium cucumber, cut lengthwise into fourths, then crosswise into 1/2 inch pieces
1 can (17 ounces) whole kernel corn, drained
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ cup shredded Cheddar cheese (about 2 ounces)

Mix cucumber, corn, salt and pepper in 1 quart casserole. Cover tightly and microwave on high (100 percent) 2 minutes; stir. Cover and microwave until vegetables are hot, 1 to 3 minutes longer. Sprinkle with shredded cheese. Cover and let stand 1 minute.

TENDER BUTTERY CORN

2 cups fresh corn kernels (about 4 ears)
2 tablespoons margarine or butter
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
Dash of nutmeg

Mix corn, margarine, salt, pepper and nutmeg in 1 quart casserole. Cover tightly and microwave on high (100 percent) 3 minutes; stir. Cover and microwave until tender, 3 to 4 minutes longer. Let stand 5 minutes.

Note: If you don't have fresh corn from the garden, you can substitute a 10-ounce package of frozen whole kernel corn.

EGG PLANT

To prepare: Just before cooking, wash eggplant and, if desired, pare. Cut into 1/2 inch cubes or 1/4 inch slices.

To microwave: For cubes, place 2 tablespoons water, 1/2 teaspoon salt and eggplant in 1 1/2 quart casserole. Cover tightly and microwave on high (100 percent) until tender, stirring every 2 minutes, 6 to 8 minutes; drain.

For slices, place 2 tablespoons water and 1/2 teaspoon salt in 9 inch pie plate. Overlap eggplant slices in a circle around edge of pie plate. Cover tightly and microwave on high (100 percent) 3 minutes; rotate pie plate 1/2 turn. Microwave until tender, 3 to 5 minutes longer; drain.

To serve: Add margarine or butter... sprinkle with grated Parmesan cheese or shredded mozzarella cheese... season with garlic salt, allspice, chili powder or oregano.

VEGETABLE STUFFED EGG PLANT

1 medium eggplant
2 tablespoons all purpose flour
¼ cup margarine or butter
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
1 clove garlic, chopped
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons half and half
½ cup coarsely chopped peanuts
1 jar (2 ounces) chopped pimientos, drained
1 tablespoon grated Parmesan cheese

1. Cut a lengthwise slice from side of eggplant. Remove and cube enough eggplant to measure 3 cups.

2. Mix eggplant, flour, margarine, green pepper, onion, garlic, salt and pepper in 1 1/2 quart casserole. Cover tightly and microwave on high (100 percent) 2 minutes; stir. Cover and microwave until mixture is thickened and eggplant is hot, 1 to 2 minutes longer. Stir in half and half, peanuts and pimiento. Fill eggplant shell with mixture; sprinkle with cheese.

3. Place eggplant shell on serving plate. Microwave uncovered on high (100 percent) until eggplant is tender, 4 to 6 minutes. Let stand 5 minutes.

3 teaspoons boiling water
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Add baking soda to boiling water and stir into batter. Mix thoroughly. Drop batter by tablespoons on greased cookie sheet. Bake 10 to 15 minutes at 400 degrees.

Filling:

ANSWER — Brenda Fouts, New York's Finger Lakes, wanted jam and jelly recipes that do not require fruit pectin such as Sure Jel because it is so expensive. Thanks to Rose Barney, Amissville, Va., who suggests she try fruit butters, and to Eva Southard, Glen Rock, for sending recipes.

Apricot Or Peach Jam

4 pounds prepared apricots or peaches
Boiling water
3 pounds sugar
⅓ cup lemon juice, optional

Wash fruit, dip in boiling water for 30 seconds, then plunge into cold water. Slip off the skins and cut the fruit in half, discard pits. Weigh the fruit. For 1 pound of apricots, allow ¾ pound sugar and 2 tablespoons lemon juice. For 1 pound peaches, allow from ¾ to 1 pound sugar and omit the lemon juice. Crush fruit slightly. Put fruit in layers alternately with layers of sugar in a kettle. Cover and let stand 3 to 4 hours. Heat slowly; stir until the sugar is dissolved. Bring to a boil and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture is thickened and the fruit is clear. Have glasses or small jars sterile and hot. Pour jam into jars and seal immediately. Makes 2 pints.

Fruit Butters

Use fresh, frozen or canned fruit, drained

If using fresh fruits that are hard such as apples or pears, cook them first to soften. Put fruit in blender and puree. Add granulated sugar. (The general rule is half as much sugar as puree).

Ground spices can be added such as 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon to 1 gallon butter.

Pour into large kettle. Boil rapidly, stirring constantly. As butter becomes thick, reduce heat to avoid splattering.

Cook until butter is thick. Test a tablespoon of hot butter on a chilled plate. If no rim of liquid forms around the edge of the butter, it is ready to can.

Ladle into hot jars and process in boiling water for 5 minutes.

Md. Farm Queen To Be Crowned

TIMONIUM, Md. — The reigning Maryland Farm Queen, Kelly Holland of Worcester County, will crown her successor at the Maryland Farm Queen Contest, Sunday, August 30, 7 p.m., in the State Fair Cow Palace.

"During my reign as 1991 Maryland Farm Queen, I've enjoyed the State Fair and the opportunity to travel throughout the State to educate the public on the importance of agriculture," said Holland. "As I pass my responsibilities on to the new Farm Queen, I will continue to encourage the promotion of agriculture in Maryland."

Young ladies, between the ages of sixteen and nineteen, who have earned their place in the 1992 Maryland Farm Queen Contest by winning county Farm Bureau-sponsored contests, will compete for this renowned title and a scholarship worth up to $2,000.

The young ladies, representing 23 Maryland counties, will be critiqued, during a two-day competition, primarily on their agricultural knowledge and experience. Each must spontaneously respond to a "fish bowl" question either related to career issues or specific farming problems. Poise, appearance, personality, communication skills, and civic involvement are secondary requirements.

The 1992 Maryland Farm Queen will be present throughout the 10-day State Fair to award prizes, and mingle with fairgoers, dignitaries, and media representatives. The runners-up will assist the Farm Queen with handing out awards and serving as hostesses for dignitaries.

The 1992 Maryland State Fair runs from Saturday, August 29, through Monday, September 7. The Fairgrounds open at 8 a.m. for livestock and horse shows, demonstration halls open at 10 a.m. and the Midway opens at 11 a.m. on weekends, and 12 noon on weekdays.

ANSWER — For Martha Luckenbaugh, New Oxford, here is the recipe for the John Silver Fish Batter that you requested.

John Silver Fish Batter

½ cup biscuit mix
½ cup all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon sugar
1 egg, beaten
2 tablespoons light oil
1 cup Club soda or beer
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind
¼ teaspoon onion powder

Mix together biscuit mix, flour, salt, and sugar. Set aside. Combine egg, oil, and half the club soda; beat well. Stir in flour mixture plus enough club soda so that the batter is the consistency of thin pancake batter. Stir in lemon rind and onion powder.

Prepare fish: Drain fish fillets and pat dry with a paper towel. Dredge in flour and allow to stand for a few minutes so the flour will not stick. Dip fish in the prepared batter and fry in hot oil. Do not crowd in pan. This batter is good on vegetables also.

Common Critters Make Good Pets

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

LEWISTOWN (Mifflin) — people and pets have been partners for thousands of years. From cats to canaries, mice to monkeys, and fish to fillies, children love pets. Although thinking of getting a pet and picking the perfect puppy can be exciting, all pets have one thing in common — they need good care. A pet depends on its owner for food, exercise, and a happy home.

The most common critters kept by kids are cats, dogs, birds, and fish. Here's some fun facts about pets. Some pets are pretty unusual. See which one you would like to care for!

Parakeets

This natural acrobat can be taught to do tricks. The parakeet can be taught to talk when it is only a few weeks old by repeating the same phrase or words over and over again. They eat seeds and fruit.

By looking at the patch of skin above the beak, you can tell which adult parakeets are male and which are female. The males have bluish-colored skin above the beak. The females, which have brownish colored skin above the beak, lay an average of five eggs. A parakeet may live 10 years or more.

Judy Armstrong, an Environmental Educator from Shaver's Creek Environmental Center, says, "We share what we have at the nature center." Here, Judy shares a Box Turtle with crowds of kids at Kid Connection — an April event in downtown Lewistown that draws thousands of kids each year.

Blake and Blueberry managed to pose a minute as the camera clicked. In a blink, Blueberry was flitting around the room, swooping and singing. Blueberry, a parakeet, belongs to Blake Selfridge of Reedsville.

Rabbits

Pet rabbits can live as long as five years. They eat grains, greens, vegetables, and hay. Because they have little protection against enemies, wild rabbits rarely live more than a year.

Cats

Healthy cats can live 12-15 years. Their whiskers are highly-sensitive sense organs. The hairs attached to nerves in the skin transmit signals to the brain when the whiskers brush against objects.

Because they're soft and sometimes cuddly, cats are a favorite pet of children.

Turtles

All turtles lay their eggs on land and cover them with soil, sand, or plant matter. As the warmth of the sun hatches the eggs, the temperature determines the sex of the hatchlings. Turtles are cold-blooded which means their body temperature stays about the same as the outside temperature. They hibernate by digging down into the mud. In the woods, box turtles eat worms, vegetables, and plants.

Snakes

Although some people do keep snakes as pets, there are a few good reasons why snakes do not make good pets. They do not move around much, have unusual eating habits, and are hard to keep healthy.

About 270 of the 2,700 kinds of snakes have venom harmful or fatal to humans. They have a keen sense of smell.

A Black Rat Snake draws the attention of curious kids, some who touched while others preferred to look — from a safe distance.

Ponies

Quick to learn and usually gentle around children, ponies can be trained for riding or for pulling carts. Needing only grass and hay for food, ponies live longer than horses.

Guinea Pig

This South American rodent was first domesticated by the Inca Indians of Peru in the 1500s. They eat grain, greens and hay, and need to gnaw on wood to wear down their continuously growing front teeth.

HOMEMADE YOGURT

6 cups goat milk

Scald milk to 100-110 degrees and cool. Whirl in blender with:

¼ cup yogurt from previous batch or plain store-bought yogurt. (If your yogurt is just for eating, you may add 1 small box of instant pudding mix, any flavor, at this point).

Incubate overnight at 95 to 100 degrees in yogurt incubator or contributor puts the mixture in 1 to 2 cup containers and sets it in oven with pilot light on overnight.

I am a 37-year-old homemaker. My husband and I are sort of hobby farmers on our 5½ acres along with our children, David, 15; Jeanne, 13, Amy, 9; and Katie, 5. My husband, Don, is a carpenter for a small cogeneration plant, and enjoys building things at home and gardening. I have a small herd of registered Nubian dairy goats that are on DHIA test and we show a bit. We have chickens, a miniature jack, 2 ponies, and usually beef. Right now we are raising a veal calf with the excess milk. I am usually busy sewing or quilting. My two middle daughters sew and are in 4-H. Since June 14 to 20 is Dairy Goat Awareness Week, I thought I'd share a recipe that I use often.

TART LEMON CAKE ROLL

3 eggs
1 cup granulated sugar
⅓ cup water
1 teaspoon vanilla
¾ cup all-purpose or cake flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Line 15½ x10½ x1-inch jelly roll pan with aluminum foil or waxed paper; grease generously. Beat eggs in small mixing bowl on high speed until very thick and lemon-colored, about 5 minutes. Pour eggs into large mixing bowl. Beat in granulated sugar, gradually. Beat in water and vanilla on low speed. Add flour, baking powder, and salt, gradually beating just until batter is smooth. Pour into pan.

Bake until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean, 12 to 15 minutes. Immediately, loosen cake from edges of pan; invert on towel sprinkled generously with confectioners' sugar (carefully remove foil). Trim off stiff edges, if necessary.

While hot, carefully roll cake and towel from narrow end. Cool on wire rack at least 30 minutes. Unroll cake; remove towel. Spread clear lemon filling over cake. Roll up; sprinkle with confectioners' sugar. Refrigerate 1 hour.

Clear Lemon Filling:

¾ cup sugar
3 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup water
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
1 tablespoon butter
⅓ cup lemon juice
4 drops yellow food coloring

Mix cornstarch, sugar, and salt in saucepan. Stir in water gradually. Cook stirring constantly until mixture thickens and boils. Boil and stir 5 minutes. Remove from heat; add lemon peel and butter. Stir in lemon juice and food coloring; cool. If filling is too soft, refrigerate until set.

Scream For Ice Cream

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — During the hot summer months there's no better way to cool off than dishing up your favorite ice cream. Throughout the month of July, consumers will be able to join the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program and scream for Pennsylvania ice cream. The "Pennsylvanians Scream For Ice Cream" campaign will feature festivals in Altoona, Scranton, Harrisburg, and Erie, along with numerous local promotions conducted in counties across the state.

In Tipton, Blair County, an ice cream festival will take place at Bland's Park, on Tuesday, July 14, from 12 to 4 p.m. Activities include ice cream novelty sampling, tin can ice cream making for kids, and a sundae bar. Visitors will follow a park map to visit the many scrumptious ice cream "stations."

Scranton will host ice cream festivities at the Courthouse Square on Thursday, July 16, from 11 a.m. to 12 p.m. An outdoor musical concert will entertain consumers as they sample delicious ice cream sundaes. There will also be dairy princess skits, a live cow and calf display, and a celebrity cow milking contest.

In Harrisburg, the state's capitol, the annual "Sundae on the Steps" promotion will be held on Tuesday, July 21, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Over 10,000 sundaes will be distributed to visitors that provide a 25 cent donation which will go to a local charity.

The last statewide promotion will take place at the Erie Zoo, on Thursday, July 23, from 12 to 4 p.m. Visitors will embark on an "Ice Cream Safari" and explore the world of ice cream. Each visitor will receive a passport that they will use to visit each of the "festival stations." The displays will include a sundae bar, frozen yogurt sampling, an ice cream novelty bar, ice cream churning demonstrations, and tin can ice cream making for kids.

Along with these statewide activities, county promotion groups have planned events at local fairs and malls. All of these festivities are designed as a salute to the state's ice cream industry. Pennsylvania is ranked second nationally in the production of ice cream and other frozen dairy desserts. And, Pennsylvanians are big consumers of this delicious dairy product.

mals, monkeys eat almost anything — birds and their eggs, flowers, frogs, fruit, grass, insects, leaves, lizards, nuts, and roots.

Raccoons

Raccoons as pets can be easily trained, are more intelligent than cats, and eat crayfish, frogs, fish, acorns, birds' eggs, corn, fruit, nuts, seeds, grasshoppers, and mice. After they reach one year old, raccoons anger easily and will bite and scratch.

Tropical Fish

These brightly colored, rapidly breeding fish are popular for home aquariums. Smaller than a goldfish, more than 600 different kinds are adapted to home aquariums.

Mongoose

This 16" animal resembles a lightweight groundhog with ratlike faces. In the wild, it fiercely preys on snakes, mice, rats, poultry, and wild birds. Popular as pets in India, Mongoose cannot be imported to the United States without a permit.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

July 4th is Independence Day. We celebrate it because it is the anniversary of the day in 1776 that the Declaration of Independence was signed from Great Britain.

I, personally, have always felt very glad that my ancestors decided to cross the ocean and settle in Lancaster County. After all, they might have decided to stay in Germany and Switzerland. Or, if they did leave everything behind, when they arrived in America, they might not have found such a productive land. In other words, I consider myself lucky to be a citizen of this wonderful country — despite it's troubles.

This day can mean many things to different people. Families with young children may make it a fun day with a picnic or swimming. For some it might be a remembrance of some happy or even sad occasion in the past.

As a child I and my sisters each were given a toy pistol that we could use only on that one day. We had red, paper caps that we shot in it as we hid in tall grass and imagined that we were scaring people. That toy might still be around "somewhere."

For my oldest daughter it is a wedding anniversary. It was one wedding that I had an active part in planning as she lived in the state of Washington. So, I ordered the cake, the flowers, and planned the menu for a reception for 30 people in our then new and large kitchen. During the morning food preparation, the pet rabbit got out of it's pen repeatedly and we finally put it in the large cake box with a porch chair on top. Nancy wore a garland of my Shasta daisies in her hair. It was a busy day!

Butchers are being asked to voluntarily comply with the proposed labeling law by displaying point of purchase information for consumers.

A Glance At Perspective Labeling Changes

Beth Whitman Pitzer
Cumberland Co.
Correspondent

MECHANICSBURG (Cumberland Co.) — How much do you read labels in the grocery store before making your purchases? The label you are familiar with will be changing in the next two years. This is a result of the Nutrition Labeling and Education Act.

Let's look at the process of the legislation as it presently stands and summarize some of the major changes that you may be seeing.

One of the biggest changes being proposed is from the traditional Recommended Daily Allowance (RDA) to Reference Daily Intake (RDI). Many of us are familiar with the RDA. It is defined as "levels of intake of essential nutrients... adequate to meet the known nutrient needs of practically all healthy persons." The proposed RDI is a new reference standard that uses population-adjusted means. That is, instead of adding an extra measure of protection for vitamin and mineral needs like the RDA did, the RDI averages nutrient needs for all age groups.

The change is a reflection of societal changes. Years ago, we were more concerned with deficiencies. Today, we're more concerned with the relationship between diet and health. So, the RDI was developed as a reference value between products, rather than as a specific personal reference.

Let's look at a specific example. As proposed, iron would have one of the biggest changes. The U.S. RDA for iron is 18 mg. The 1989 RDA for women is the highest of all population groups at 15 mg. There is an extra 3 mg of protection. The proposed RDI is 12 mg. It reflects an average of all age groups. This reflects a 33% decrease from the RDA.

New changes are proposed in the meat case as well. The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) is asking butchers to voluntarily give consumers more nutrition information through displays and posters. This is called voluntary compliance. If the law goes through as proposed, it will be to a butcher's advantage to display information voluntarily so stricter labels won't be required on individual packages of raw meat products later.

The information that will be provided about meat products will be for lean only, not fat included. For example, most people trim fat around the outside of a sirlion steak. Food has a leaner value this way. Since 88% of the population trims fat and only 12% doesn't, only lean values are given. It's something to keep in mind when looking at nutrient values.

A very positive change with the new regulations is the first time specific regulations will be used to carry any health claims. FDA is defining health claims as reflecting a specific link between food and health claim. The following four nutrients and health claims are allowable because claims have been documented by scientific studies. They include: Calcium and Osteoporosis, Sodium and High Blood Pressure, Fat and Coronary Heart, Fat and Cancer.

We've looked at RDI's, now let's throw out another acronym. It's DRV. It stands for Daily Reference Value. Values are based on 2350 calorie diets. They're listed as follows: Total Fat- 75 grams, Saturated Fat- 25 grams, Cholesterol- 300 mg., Total Carbohydrates- 325 mg., Dietary Fiber- 25 mg., Sodium- 2400 mg.

The Daily Reference Values may help consumers look at foods and compare them with daily recommendations that haven't been listed on labels before. This is very positive. On the other hand, consumers need to be aware that they need to look at the diet for the whole day and not for just one food. We need a balance of lots of different foods to make up a healthy diet.

Below is more list of specifies being proposed by FDA/USDA. There are descriptors for meal-type products based on 100 gram portions. Let's look at the category for "low". Low Sodium: Less than 140 mg. per 100 grams, Very Low Sodium: Still being considered., Low Calorie: 105 calories per 100 grams, Low Fat: 3.5 grams or less per 100 gram serving, Low in Saturated Fat: 1 gram or less of saturated fat per 100 grams and not more than 15% of calories from saturated fat., Low Cholesterol: 20 mg. or less per 100 gram portion and 2 grams or less of saturated fat per 100 grams.

When the new labeling law is enacted, consumers will have advantages over the old labels. It is likely that there will be many new questions for consumers to interpret.

Ask The Master

I'd like to try some canning this summer but don't want to buy a lot of equipment. What do you suggest?

You will need a boiling water canner to can fruits, tomatoes and pickled products; a pressure canner if you plan to can vegetables and meats; and the canning jars to put your food in. Most kitchens have much of the other equipment needed for canning. A good selection of long-handled spoons and ladles is useful. Measuring cups and spoons are necessary. You should also have sharp knives, a large colander, and a variety of large sauce pans. One piece of equipment you may need to purchase is a special jar lifter to remove jars safely from the canners

I am planning to buy a boiling water canner. What should I look for?

Boiling water canners are available in the stores. They should have tight fitting lids and a metal basket to hold the jars off the bottom and separate them from each other. The kettle should be deep enough to allow to water to boil rapidly one to two inches above the top of the jars.

I have a lot of mayonnaise jars in my attic. Can I use them for canning?

Most commerical mayonnaise jars will work just fine for canning foods in a boiling water canner. Check to see that the two-piece lid fits properly on the canning jars before using them. Mayonnaise jars are not heat tempered sufficiently for the higher heat of a pressure canner so we do not recommend using them in a pressure canner.

Being 40 Is No Cause To Be Upset

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

BETHEL (Berks Co.) — When Berks County Society 2 of Farm Women observed their 40th anniversary in June, they decided to throw a celebration party.

They invited the 11 other Berks County groups to join them at the Bethel Community Building on June 23. More than 125 women participated in the celebration.

"It doesn't seem possible that 40 years have passed," said Martha Klahr, who is both president and a charter member from the original group.

Klahn and three other charter members Irene Donkel, Lillian Webber, and Betty Ziegler Boyer recalled the excitement of forming the group that now has 33 members and is the biggest Farm Women group in Berks County.

Helen Schmehl recited a poem that she wrote about the history of the group that was formed in 1952. She ended by saying, "Meeting, laughing, sharing, and such after all these years still mean so much. We'll go right on and won't forget that being 40 is no cause to be upset."

Because the state organization of Farm Women honors members with a gold pin, Arlene Witman, president of the state organization that has about 3,370 members, presented a pin to Ada Wolfe, who turns 90 on July 14.

The Pine Grove Marimba Band entertained by playing a variety of styles in "Name that tune." To the delight of the audience, the band incorporated several Farm Women members in a Hawaiian hula dance.

The program committee, Lillian Harnish, Marie Gettel, Beatrice Frantz, and Mae Zimmerman gave out door prizes to all those in attendance.

One of the youngest members of the group, Dorinda Lingle said, "I wanted to be a Farm Woman ever since I can remember, but I had to wait until I was old enough." She recalled the contagious enthusiasm her grandmother, Mary Bashore, and mother, Wendy Lingle, showed as Farm Women members.

"They always have so much fun," said Dorinda, who joined the group when she became 18. Now, a member for 1½ years, Dorinda like her mother and grandmother is an avid supporter of Farm Women, whose purpose is to contribute to the power and influence of the farm, home, and community.

It's not so bad being 40 according to Berks County Society 2, at their celebration held at Bethel Community Center.

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

BELLEVILLE (Mufflin Co.) — "We're going to talk about getting sick," Mike Smith began.

Smith, an inspector for the Altoona Department of Health, spoke at a meeting arranged by Mifflin County Home Economist Jane Beightol. The purpose was to discuss food safety for those who serve food on an irregular basis such as at church dinners, fire hall dinners, buffets, country clubs, etc.

Bacteria is everywhere. But by properly handling food, the hazards of bacteria growth can be minimized. And because of USDA, FDA, PADA, and DER regulations, we can be confident that the food we buy, from a reputable vendor, contains a minimal amount of bacteria.

But after purchasing food, food handlers have two controls to prevent outbreaks of food poisoning - temperature and time.

TEMPERATURE

"A good thermometer is the most important tool in food protection," Smith emphasized. "Probe thermometers are the most accurate."

Make sure food is of proper temperature when you receive it. Keep hot foods hot (above 140°F) and cold foods cold (below 45°F). Smith warns about the Danger Zone, between 60° and 120°F, where bacteria thrive and multiply. Potentially hazardous foods, mostly animal products, should not be kept between 45°F and 140°F for more than two hours.

Reheat cooked foods to 160°F - thoroughly through. Hot foods on a buffet table should stay at 140°F or hotter. Heat hot foods to 165°F first before maintaining 140°F on the buffet table. Organisms are not destroyed at 140°F. Salmonella is destroyed with high heat.

Maintain refrigerator temperatures below 45°F.

TIME

Any transition between temperatures, Smith says, should be done generally within one hour. Cool cooked foods rapidly in shallow containers in the refrigerator. Do not cool hot foods to room temperature before placing in the refrigerator.

CLEAN AND SANITIZE

Cleaning removes visible soil and does a 90%-job of getting rid of organisms. But all utensils which come in contact with food should be sanitized, such as knives, slicers, cold cut trays, etc.

Most of the pots and pans sanitize themselves through the high temperature cooking process, if food is then removed and not allowed to sit for a while.

To sanitize, Smith recommends inexpensive bleach, using one tablespoon per gallon of water for dishwashing. Using two tablespoons will "wipe anything out!"

Separate raw foods, equipment, and utensils from utensils and equipment used to handle cooked foods, especially cutting boards.

TYPES OF BACTERIA

Illness from food stems from three sources - physical, such as a foreign object like glass in food, chemical, such as clenaing products, pesticides, and residues from improper containers, and biological, meaning bacteria.

Both bacteria itself and its byproducts can make you sick. The Health Department labels illness an outbreak if two or more people share a common food, location, and time. The exception, Smith states, is botulism. One person with botulism is an outbreak. Fifty percent affected by botulism die.

The Department of Environmental Resources "Foodborne Illness Guide" offers this information:

STAPHYLOCOCCUS is on the hair, skin, nostrils, and sores of 50% of the healthy people. Illness onset time is 1-6 hours. Food preparers should handle food as little as possible (use utensils) and practice good personal hygiene.

SALMONELLA is bacteria that is killed at high temperatures. Do not thaw frozen foods at room temperature. Onset time is 5-72 hours.

CLOSTRIDIUM (BOTULISM) is associated with improperly processed or canned foods, unrefrigerated foods of low acidity, and home canned foods. It affects the central nervous system. Fifty percent of the people with botulism die.

To prevent botulism, discard all foods in swollen unopened cans. Keep food refrigerated and do not serve home canned foods in an eating establishment, using only commercially canned foods.

BACILLUS CEREUS is associated with rice, puddings, sauces, soups, and meat loaf. Onset time is 1/2 to 5 hours. Do not store cooked food at room temperature - chill rapidly. Reheat cooked foods at 165°F before holding at 140F.

LISTERIA is a bacteria associated with dairy products, eggs, and meat. It grows at refrigerator temperatures down to 34 degrees. Onset time is 4 days to three weeks. Use pasteurized milk, and cook foods thoroughly.

CLOSTRIDIUM PERFRINGENS shows up in cooked meats and stews that have been reheated. Onset is 10-12 hours. Refrigerate rapidly, or reheat to 165°F.

HEPATITIS A is associated with contaminated water or milk, raw or undercooked clams or oysters, sliced meat, and salads. Onset is 10-50 days. To prevent food exposure, wash hands thoroughly, cook foods thoroughly, purchase shellfish only from approved growing areas, and exclude infected persons from handling food.

TRICHINOSIS is associated with pork, bear meat, and homemade raw pork sausage. Onset is 10-14 days. Cook all pork to an internal temperature of 150°F. Freeze and store pork 5°F for 20 days, 10°F for 10 days, 20°F for 6 days.

ONE FINAL RULE WHEN IN DOUBT, THROW IT OUT!!

Paper Or Plastic Bags?

LEWISBURG (Unhion Co.) — After making numerous decisions about what foods to purchase, consumers are faced with one last decision before leaving the grocery store — paper or plastic. Is one really better for the environment than the other? As with most stories, there are two viewpoints.

Plastic grocery bags are light, sturdy and easy to carry because of built in handles. They also have the added advantage of preventing foods from leaking onto your car should an accident occur while enroute from the store to home.

Plastic bags are made from nonrenewable petroleum resources. Plastics can be recycled, but not as easily as glass, aluminum or paper. Part of the problem of recycling plastic stems from the fact that there are at least seven types. Although two plastic items may look similar, they could be made from different types of resins. This makes separating plastics for recycling difficult. The plastic industry has begun to address this problem by coding plastics with numbers to help consumers and recycling processors identify the type of resin used in production. Paper, glass, and aluminum can be recycled into packaging for food, and can be recycled endlessly. However, most plastic recycling is a one time event. Furthermore, plastic must be recycled into a product for non-food use. For example, plastic soda bottles cannot be recycled into new bottles. They can be recycled into products such as bathtubs, flower pots, parking lot car stops, toys, and trash cans. In addition to not being easily recycled, plastic production and processing requires the use of toxic chemicals. Many of the plants that produce these chemicals also produce hazardous waste and pollute the air. In 1986, the EPA, Environmental Protection Agency, ranked the 20 top chemicals whose production generates the most hazardous waste. Five of the top six were chemicals commonly used by the plastic industry (propylene, phenol, ethylene, polystyrene, and benzene).

Plastic grocery bags may be labeled degradable. In other words, they will decompose over time. Biodegradation takes place when air is present. Photodegradation occurs when sunlight is available. Most of the garbage we generate is landfilled (about 95%). In landfills, garbage is buried beneath layers of soil which make it difficult for air or sunlight to reach discarded items. When plastic bags are burned, they emit harmful gases.

Brown paper grocery bags have been around for a long time. To provide the strength necessary for groceries, the bags must be made from 100% virgin paper.

Heidi Negley Represents Cumberland County Dairy Industry

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — Heidi Negley of Shippensburg was crowned as Cumberland County's 1992 Dairy Princess during the county's 25th annual pageant held June 19 at the Embers Convention Center at Carlisle.

The theme for the pageant was "Milk: A super Natural Resource."

Negley, one of three contestants, won the crown with an unusual program that featured her dressed in a cow suit.

"Heidi the Cow" explained her jewelry — an ear tag and a bell — and talked about the importance of the large udder on the front of her costume.

"M," she said, "stands for the many farmers in the dairy industry."

"I, is for the important products of milk, like ice cream and yogurt," she said.

"L," Negley said, "stands for life, and the fact that milk makes life longer and healthier."

She ended her program by observing that "Milk is udderly delicious."

The other two contestants, Diane Myers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Myers of Boiling Springs, and Laura Lee Deitch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Deitch Sr. of Mechanicsburg, were appointed alternate dairy princesses.

In her program, Myers pretended to be fishing. She caught a carton of milk some cheddar cheese, some ice cream and some frozen yogurt. "All in all," she said, she had a "great catch" of diary products.

Deitch came on the stage as a talk show host Sally Real Seal and interviewed Miranda Milk, Chester Cheese, and Beatrice Butter. They all told her how good they are.

Negley is a senior at Big Spring High School and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Negley Jr. She is a member of the Future Homemakers of America chapter at her school and is vice president of the youth group at her church.

Her family has a 150-acre farm with 75 head of cattle and milks 40 Holsteins.

Negley said she entered the pageant because she thinks it will be a great experience to promote milk at fairs and other events over the next year.

She siad she got the idea for her costume from a woman at her church. The rest of the program was her own idea, she said.

Negley was crowned by 1991 County Dairy Princess Melanie Dietrich.

In addition to the princess contestants, three junior dairy representatives for the county were introduced. They are Emily Dietrich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Dietrich of Newburg; Amanda Naugle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Naugle of Carlisle; and Betsy Walton, daugther of Mr. and Mrs. David Walton of Carlisle.

Former Cumberland County dairy princesses of the past 25 years also were introduced, starting with Ann Niesley Black, who was county and State Dairy Princess in 1968.

Other former princesses who attended the program were Lynda Gutshall Bear from 1969, Carol Ocker Schurman from 1970, Sharon Bear Bussey from 1972, Maxine Garman Barrick from 1974, Debbie Nehf Miller from 1975, Karen Smith Hamilton from 1977.

Karen Hornbaker Royer from 1979, Sharon Comman Hammond from 1980 Vicki Basehore Lantz from 1981, Nancy Yorlets Livingston from 1982, and Carolyn Myers Gutshall from 1983.

Also, Vonda Wickard Kelso from 1984, Sherry Greegor Kling from 1986, Patricia Dunkleberger from 1987, Christine Davidson from 1988, Bobbie Jo Gutshall from 1989, and Dannielle Gutshall from 1990.

Sit And Spit Contest Draws Crowd At Cherry Fair

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

Schaefferstown (Lebanon Co.) — Emily Houtz puckered up, threw her head back, and spit a cherry pit with all the force she could muster.

"It takes lots of practice," the 12-year-old said. "There is a trick to it, but I'm not telling."

Somehow, the secret must have been divulged because, this year, Eli Bender replaced Emily as the champion in the Sit and Spit Contest held annually at Historic Schaefferstown's Annual Cherry Fair. That was in the children's division. In the adult competition, Jim White spit his pit an astounding 27 feet 6 inches.

The contest draws participants from as far away as Iowa. According to Houtz and other regulars, the event is one annual event they won't miss no matter what.

"My friends and I buy bags of cherries just so we can sit on the porch and practice," Houtz said. "It's lots of fun to see how much we can improve each year."

Mr. and Mrs. Nick Ford said that they mark their calendar every year. "Our whole family practices. We sit on the porch and get our neighbors to try it. Once you enter, you want to keep coming."

A first-time participant from New Jersey said that he read about the event in the paper and came just to enter the contest. Since he had never practiced before, he figured he wouldn't win, but, he said, "It will be great just to tell folks about it."

The Fair, held at the 90-acre Schaeffer Farm Museum, includes a sit and pit contest, train rides, cake and pie walks, and other family activities. The Fair demonstrates the many homemade foods that can be made with cherries such as hand-turned cherry ice cream, cherry fritters, cherry dumplings, and cherry cider.

Emily Houtz puckers up for the Sit and Spit Contest held at the 24th annual Historic Schaefferstown Cherry Fair on June 27.

Need Moss Control?

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Moss is one of the most persistent and annoying weeds that occurs in home lawns, but you can control it, says a Penn State turfgrass scientist.

"Moss is an opportunistic plant that grows in bare soil or where grass is weak and thin," says Dr. Peter Landschoot, assistant professor of turfgrass science. "Once moss has invaded the lawn, grass won't spread into those areas."

Attempts to get rid of moss are rarely effective unless a dense, actively-growing turf is established in its place, he says.

"To control moss, you have to consider the reasons why it began to grow," says Landschoot. "Moss usually thrives as a result of conditions that aren't conducive to good turf growth, such as poor soil fertility, acid soil, heavy shade, excessive moisture or shallow, rocky soils."

The first step to control moss is to test the soil for nutrient content and pH. Soil test kits are available from your county cooperative extension office for a nominal fee.

"If the soil is deficient in nutrients or needs liming, the soil test report will indicate how much fertilizer and lime to apply and when to apply them," says Landschoot. "Over time, improved soil conditions will help your grass compete with the moss." If shade or moisture limit good turf growth, steps can be taken to correct the situation. "For example, remove some trees or tree branches to increase sunlight and air circulation, or plant grasses that are adapted to shaded or moist areas," he says.

"Fine fescues adapt best to shaded, well-drained soils, while rough bluegrass is better adapted to shaded, moist soils," he says. "But neither of these species survives in extremely heavy shade or soils that are saturated for long periods.

"Attempt to eliminate moss with chemicals only after the limiting factors for good turf growth have been corrected," says Landschoot. "Unfortunately, there are only a few chemicals available."

Those currently registered include DeMossTM from Mycogen Corporation and LESCO Moss and Algae EraserTM from LESCO, Inc.

"These products contain salts that will dehydrate or 'burn' the moss," says Landschoot. "But they also can burn desirable turfgrasses if used improperly, so be sure to follow the directions on the label."

Grassland FFA Members Exel At State Convention

Pennsylvania State FFA Activities Week was held recently at Penn State University.

Twenty-two members of the Grassland FFA Chapter, Garden Spot High School, competed in the numerous contests and the chorus and served as delegates to the state convention.

The following are the results of the contests:

Andrea Snader and Neil Wenger competed in the aquatic resources contest, taking first place (gold) and fourth place (bronze), respectively. Snader will represent Pennsylvania at the National FFA Convention in Kansas City, Mo.

Wade Esbenshade, Jesse Miller, Shelly Ogline, Jason Reifsnyder, Duane Ringler, Ronda Ringler, Kim Thornton, and Joshua Troxell comprised the Parliamentary Procedure Team, placing fifth in the contest and receiving a silver metal.

Senior Jeremy Schans competed in the farm management contest, placing tenth, while Sherman Stoltzfus placed fourth in Forestry contest, receiving a gold award. Stoltzfus will go on to compete at the Eastern States Exposition in Springfield.

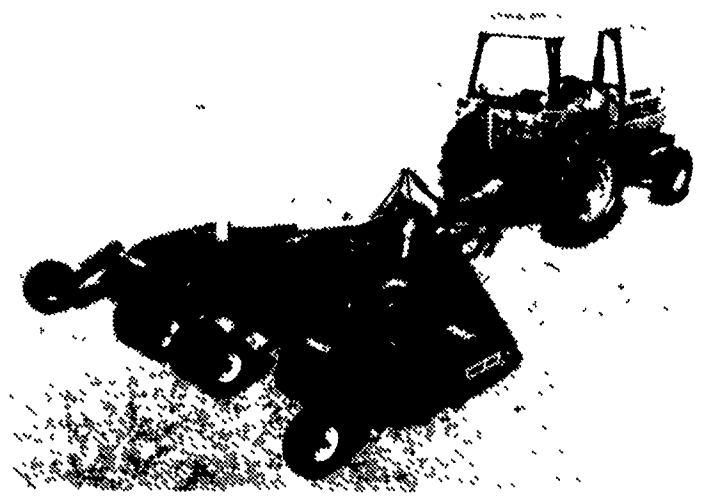
Sophomores Sherry Martin and Tanya Sauder excelled in the land judging contest, placing third and sixth respectively and receiving gold awards. Martin will compete in the international land judging contest in Oklahoma next May.

Freshman Linda Huber placed third in the poultry judging contest, receiving a gold award. Classmates Shannon Horst and Connie Zeiset placed sixth and eighth, respectively, for silver awards, with Cheryl Weaver placing twelfth. Huber will advance to national competition at Kansas City, while Horst will compete in the Eastern States Exposition. In addition, Zeiset excelled in the junior prepared public speaking contest, placing second for a gold award.

In addition, the Grassland FFA Chapter received a first place gold award for their Building Our American Communities (BOAC) project. Several ongoing projects that make up the BOAC project include habitat improvement, a fitness trail, a hiking trail, and stream improvement projects. Also, the chapter received a first place gold award for the FFA Chapter Rating Form. The Chapter Rating Form is a summary report of the activities planned and carried out by the 12 standing committees that operate throughout the year. Both applications will be forwarded to compete at the national level.

Shelly Ogline was elected the state FFA reporter. Shelly will spend her year representing the state FFA organization through chapter visits and acting as the reporter for all state events.

NOT ALL FIELDS ARE PERFECTLY FLAT.



That's why the Bush Hog® model 2615 15-foot cutter's wings are designed to float along contours as severe as 90 degrees up or 22 degrees down while shredding stalks, clipping pastures or cutting along rights-of-ways, drainage ditches, terraces and fence rows. As it does so, an automatic height adjustment keeps the wings cutting at the same height as the center section. A framing system featuring closed box members allows us to make the 2615 pounds lighter without sacrificing any of the strength you've come to expect from a Bush Hog. And, less weight not only means less wear and tear on your tractor but it has also allowed us to cut the price.

Why pay more to get less – make a Bush Hog's success your success.

4-H Swine, Sheep Show

Adams County 4-H and FFA members are busy getting ready for the 9th annual Swine and Sheep Show and Sale. This annual event will take place on Tuesday, July 21 at the South Mountain Fairgrounds near Arendtsville.

More than 60 hogs and 30 lambs will be shown in market classes with a champion and reserve champion selected for each species. In addition, the 4-H and FFA members will compete in senior, intermediate, and junior combined fitting/showing classes for each species. A top individual will be named in each fitting/showing class. The swine show starts at 8 a.m. and the sheep show at 11 a.m.

All hogs and lambs at the show will be sold Tuesday evening, July 21, at a competitive bid auction. This is an ideal opportunity for anyone to purchase quality pork or lamb for your freezer. Interested buyers bid the price per pound they desire for an animal they select, and the animal will auctioned to the highest bidder.

Leaders and members will try to arrange transportation to a local butcher. After the animal is sold, the buyer may give specific instructions to the butcher for specific processing and preparation. The sheep sale begins at 7 p.m. and swine sale begins at 7:45 p.m.

The youth livestock program is designed to help youth develop an understanding of feeding, fitting, and showing swine and sheep. The support of the community is essential to help bring the process to a successful end. If a buyer is not interested in the meat product, they still buy an animal. After purchasing the animal, provisions will be available to reconsign the animal at market price to normal meat product buyers on the grounds. The buyer simply absorbs the cost difference between what he paid and the market resell price.

Solanco Community Club

The Solanco Community Club had their first meeting of the year recently at the Hoffman Community Building.

Each project leader that attended gave a report of previous work and of accomplishments. The club then elected new officers for the 1992 year.

The new officers are Marilyn Holloway, president; Sharon Lefever, vice president; Lisa Wolgemuth, secretary; Kim McLaughlin, treasurer; and the news reporter Joy Young.

A talk was given on the importance of Baby Blue Forms and keeping them up to date. This talk was presented by Vonnie McLaughlin.

After the meeting was adjourned, each project group met for a brief moment to discuss future activities.

World Limousin Conference To Draw 16 Countries

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — When Limousin breeders from 16 countries come together in Ft. Worth, Texas July 13-18, they will be discussing trends in the international beef industry as much as the phenomenal worldwide growth and acceptance of the Limousin breed.

That's when some 200 cattlemen will attend the 10th biannual World Limousin Cattle Conference, only the second time it has been held in the United States. That's when cattlemen from around the world will discuss everything from the potential of genetic documentation through DNA to carcass and palatability traits to the relationship between muscularity and muscle to bone ratio.

According to Dr. Wayne Vanderwert, executive vice president of the North American Limousin Foundation (NALF), "This conference offers a tremendous opportunity to cattlemen, domestically and internationally, to share ideas aimed at the global expansion of beef industry. Most will probably be amazed at the number of commonalities they share, rather than the differences."

Before sitting down at the conference table in Ft. Worth, approximately 150 of the participants will have taken advantage of preconference tours through Minnesota, South Dakota, and Texas. Tour stops revolve around both Limousin operations and a variety of other agricultural operations.

"Around the world, the U.S. is recognized as the agricultural leader," said Vanderwert. "These tours are aimed at sharing the scope and diversity of it with our international guests."

The tour offers the chance to view the breed in the pastures of the world leader, in terms of Limousin numbers.

"In this country as well as in many others, Limousin continues to be the fastest growing major beef breed," said Vanderwert. In the U.S., Limousin has posted five consecutive years of record growth and is one of the breeds that today is vying for position as the third largest major beef breed in the country.

Rec-Park, 4-H Bring Small Pets To Kids

Kids from all over the Gettysburg area are learning about small pets through a joint venture of Gettysburg Rec-Park and 4-H.

The new Small Pets Project is sponsored by the Adams County Extension Office and is just one of several special features of Gettysburg Rec-Park's Adventure Park program.

In Adventure Park, kids spend the day at three Rec-Park sites, making crafts and enjoying recreation activities. Rec-Park also arranges speical guests for the kids, such as 4-H small pets.

The members of Adventure Park hear how to feed and care for guinea pigs, cats, hamsters, and gerbils, and see the pets up close. The 4-H program is designed to introduce urban youth to animals and to the fun of owning a pet of their own.

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

The red's missing from our red, white and blue.

No tomatoes for the Fourth.

Each year, it's a key garden goal: fresh, homegrown tomatoes by Independence Day. Sort of a personal triumph to help celebrate our nation's birthday.

Raspberries (which are ready) with vanilla ice cream (for which I'm ALWAYS ready) contribute the blue and white for an Independence Day weekend food theme.

But the red in the tomatoes didn't make it.

Not that we weren't off to a good start toward the annual Tomatoes for the Fourth Race this season.

I planted early the seeds of an early variety. The garden was tilled, worked and ready for planting in good time. And even the rows of black plastic mulch went down ahead of schedule.

Three sturdy, eight-inches or so tall, Early Girl stalks I'd carefully nurtured in the greenhouse, along with a trio of patio-type tomatoes, were the first transplants to the vegetable patch. Around each of the standard tomatoes went a sort of protective windbreak, formed by slipping plastic grocery bags, bottom removed, over a four-cornered frame of dead sticks.

The resulting windbreak sheltered the young stalks from spring's brisk, chilly winds, while allowing the top open for air and growth. When evenings turned chilly, another plastic grocery bag, turned upside down and stripped over the four-courner frame of plastic, made an enclosed, snug tent of sorts.

Except that, early on, something snapped off one of the three plants, leaving behind a bare, four-inch-high, stalk.

One down. Two to go. Experience told me the bare stalk would shoot leaves and eventually bounce back, but lose a couple of weeks of early growth.

A week later, after chilly days and frost-touched nights that demanded repeated plastic-tent protection, the remaining two plants looked fine, but weren't showing much growth. They appeared to be just sitting there, wrapped in their plastic windbreaks, contemplating dormancy..

Fourth of July tomato possibilities were fast fading.

Garbage-spurred inspiration struck one frost-threatening, early May evening. I filled with water eight, two-liter, clear-plastic soft drink containers that had been accumulating under the basement sink for months for whatever use someday might present itself. And this was it.

The eight water-filled containers went in a circle around the sturdiest-looking, but slow-growing, tomato stalk. And over the top, against the threat of frost, I stretched a plastic-bag tent during nighttime hours.

In about ten days, that lagging tomato stalk had doubled in size. Before long, the stem was as thick as my thumb. And while the stalks around it grew slowly, this plant was beginning to dangle stems and leaves out over the perimeter of the water-filled plastic encirclement.

By early June, the stalk was nearly three feet high and showed buds. And, by mid-June, the buds had developed into tiny green embryonic tomatoes.

Soon, I had to dig in under the jungle of tomato foliage to find the water-filled containers so I could reuse them on a couple of later starts of special plants.

But, even when the "oomph" of a slightly-warmer environment from the water in the plastic bottles, the evening temperatures have remained too cool in this unseasonably chilly late spring and early summer to deliver the goods by the goal day.

We'll have Independence Day red in waving flags and fireworks and, gosh, maybe even a few late strawberries. But, no homegrown holiday tomatoes from this garden.

Perhaps a readjustment of goals is in order.

Gee, I hope we have homegrown tomatoes for Labor Day.

4-H Cottontails Club

The 4-H Cottontails Club met at Turbett Grange Hall for their monthly meeting on Thursday, June 18 at 7 p.m.

Thirteen members were present. Items for the scrapbook were taken. Cages for the 4-H Fair and county fair were decided upon and will be ordered immediately.

The number of rabbits allowed at the 4-H and county fair were discussed. The 4-H handbook was briefly discussed and all members were informed that the books must be completed and turned into Mr. Dalton before the fair or members cannot show their rabbits.

Katherine Queitzsch, 4-H youth/extenison aide, gave a demonstration and showed a video on how to be effective when giving a presentation.

The next meeting for the club will be July 16 at 7 p.m. at the Turbett Grange Hall.

4-H Alumni Of The Year

Nita Rivell Erickson of Gibbstown, N.J. was named Gloucester County's 1992 4-H Alumni of the Year.

Erickson, along with 20 other 4-H alumni, each from a different county in New Jersey, was honored at a banquet held at 4-H Action Days at Rugers University in New Brunswick.

Erickson's 7-year effort in the horse and dog programs, as well as her year-round work with the prisoner release program, demonstrate her dedication to the 4-H club. Erickson is not only involved with programs and keeping the 4-H center in top condition, she also demonstrates with her horse in the annual 4-H fair.

Erickson is currently a respected member of the Gloucester County Sheriff's Department, a job she became interested in because of her involvement with 4-H.

4-H Clubs Tour Cambria Cogen Plant

The Cambria Cogen Plant on old Route 22 east of Ebensburg was the site for the 1992 Cambria County 4-H Local Government Day held for Cambria County 4-H'ers and families by the Cambria County Cooperative Extension youth development program. Nearly 40 4-H'ers and family members were greeted by Larry Adkins of the Cogen staff, and the group was shown demonstrations of what is happening inside the plant to produce electricity.

After the demonstrations, the group toured the plant so they could see first-hand how the electricity is produced at Cogen. When the tour was over, Cambria Cogen Plant furnished a lunch catered by St. Francis College for the enjoyment of the 4-H members and their families.

The Cambria County Cooperative Extension youth development program sponsors the Local Government Day for the 4-H members and families as part of their Citizenship Program.

Members Meeting Highlights Conservation

David Hiebert
Westmoreland County
Correspondt

MILL RUN (Fayette County) — "We conserve the land," brags the Western Pennsylvania Conservancy in its promotional material. Working out that slogan is evident in many ways, especially in the members' day activities held each spring at the Bear Run Nature Preserve. The most recent members' meeting was held in May. The Bear Run Nature Preserve, which includes Fallingwater, are located on state Route 381 in Fayette County about halfway between Somerset and Uniontown.

The Conservancy's appeal to families is particularly evident from the schedule at the members' event. Hayrides provided by local farmers, a family nature walk, and a children's niche of activities are scheduled on a continuous basis all day long. Both the experience and the flexible schedule appeals to families.

Members' day is also special because it is the only day children are allowed on a tour of the Conservancy's hottest attraction — Fallingwater. By early afternoon on this members' day, more than 500 persons had toured the house designed by architect Frank Lloyd Wright. The residence was completed in 1939 as a weekend home for the Kaufmann family who owned the Pittsburgh-based Kaufmann's department stores. The structures, which contain many works of art, are now viewed as a works of art themselves.

Conservation and education go together

In the continuing effort to inform Conservancy members of conservation issues, special speakers presented programs on environmental issues. Topics included "Pittsburgh's peregrine falcons," which presented dramatic video and slides of the nesting, hatching and banding process for a pair of this endangered species; "Where has all the water gone?" which discussed the advantages and possibilities of composting toilets; and the "Conservancy Slide Program," which gave detail about a variety of Conservancy projects and history.

Brian Hill of the PRC (Pennsylvania Resources Council), and Michael Krempasky, executive director of DER's Citizens Advisory Council (CAC), presented information on several environmental legislation efforts. Mr. Krempasky's report included a brief overview of the CAC report "These woods are ours."

After visiting all of Pennsylvania's state forest areas, the panel concluded that Pennsylvania has some of the most valuable hardwood forests in the world. They Hayrides: Dan Johnson, Mill Run, son of a local farmer, provided hay rides for members of the Western Pennsylvania Conservancy. The hayrides were one of three continuous activities at the recent members' day meeting at the Conservancy's Bear Run Nature Preserve. The 4,200 acre preserve includes more than 20 miles of hiking trails, the Bear Run watershed and Fallingwater, the weekend home designed by Frank Lloyd Wright and built in 1939 for the Kaufmann family of Pittsburgh. concluded that wildness is a principle for forest management. Wildness, in their definition, is not wilderness, but it is not "tree farm" either. Regeneration is usually carried out through natural processes, and regeneration has come under increasing pressure from browsing deer. In more than half of areas that need regeneration, no planting takes place.

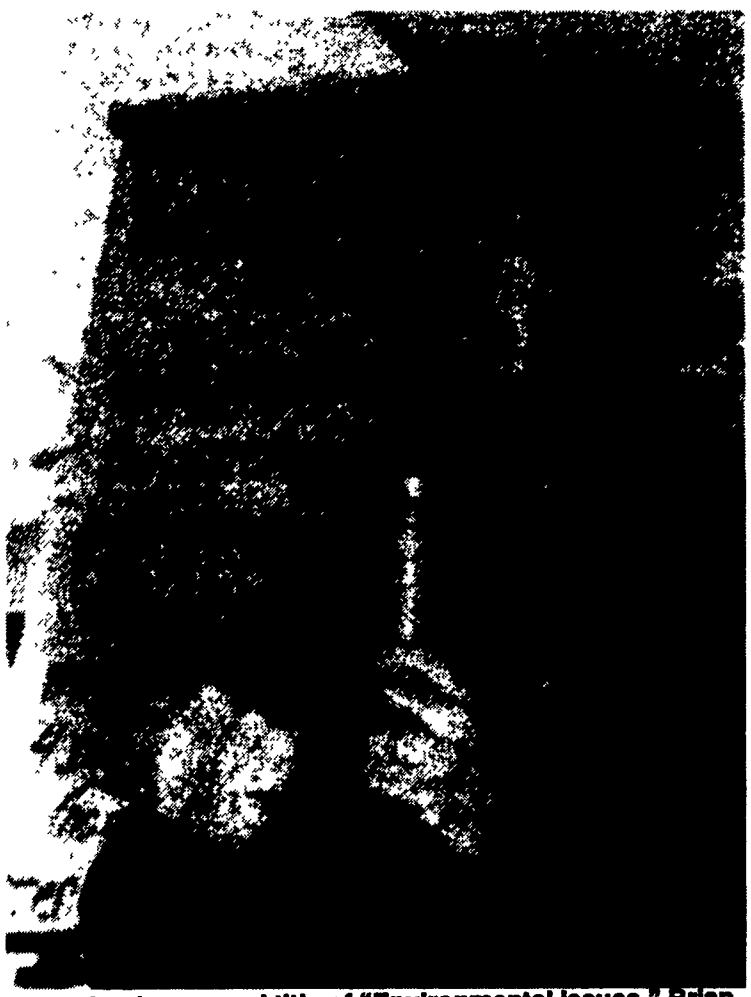
One other conclusion by the CAC is that the most sensible strategy for dealing with the gypsy moth is to integrate it into Pennsylvania's ecology. That will mean reducing the proportion of oak trees—now about half of all trees—since it is a favorite of the gypsy moth in its larva stage.

Of special interest to farmers is the Conservancy's Farm and Woodlands Program. Concerned about land use, participants can protect their productive, beautiful farms from development. Through the use of deed restrictions, conservation easements, and other tools, landowners can achieve tax savings, estate planning and land protection. Through the plan, lands that serve as buffers to existing wild or natural areas, lands that help preserve open space, land that is part of the state's agricultural preservation program or lands that have significant plant or wildlife species can all be protected.

The Conservancy has more than 18,000 members, and about 7,500 family memberships. Beginning in 1932, this private non-profit organization has preserved more than 160,000 acres of land. Members' benefits include a newsletter and calendar, and two free passes to Fallingwater.

For more information on membership, the Farm and Woodlands Program or the 1993 Members day activities write to Western Pennsylvania Conservancy, 316 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, PA 15222. Phone (412)288-2777.



Under the general title of "Environmental Issues," Brian Hill presented information to members of the Western Pennylvania Conservancy. Brian, representing the Pennsylvania Resources Council, Inc. (PRC), said that his organization supports passage of Pennsylvania Nutrient Management Act, (HB 496) because it provides for the best management of nutrients and because it addresses the problem of contamination of water from nonpoint sources. Queen Contestants Wanted For Lancaster Poultry Association

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Lancaster County Poultry Association is seeking young girls interested in representing a leading agriculture industry. Girls between the ages of 18 to 20 that have some indirect or direct experience in the poultry industry are encouraged to apply. The Poultry Association will be presenting a $750 scholarship to the new queen. This will give a young girl the opportunity to make contacts with industry people and many school children.

If interested please call Guy Martin at (717) 626-2074 or (717) 397-7820 by July 10.

Get Rid Of Hazardous Waste

Do you know how to get rid of your old paints and stains, cleansers and polishes, used oil and antifreeze? Throwing them in the trash can cause problems in waste handling facilities, increasing the toxic elements in emissions or ash residue from resource recovery facilities or leachate from a landfill. There is a better way to dispose of them if you live in Lancaster County.

As a resident of Lancaster City or County you can take them to the Household Hazardous Waste Facility to dispose of at no charge. The center is located at the Lancaster County Solid Waste Management Authority at 1299 Harrisburg Pike and has daytime and limited evening and weekend hours. Everyone must make an appointment before dropping off materials by calling the authority at (717) 397-9968.

Wastes accepted at the center include automobile products (transmissions and brake fluids, antifreeze, used oil, batteries), household cleansers, floor and furniture polish, gasoline, kerosene, household batteries, old chemistry sets, paints and paint related products (stains, turpentine, thinner, rust protectant, pesticides, herbicides, insecticides, photographic chemicals, and pool chemicals).

Only materials generated in the household are accepted at the center. Materials from businesses, schools and farms are not accepted. Other items not accepted include propane tanks, radioactive waste, and explosives and ammunition. The Authority has made arrangements with other facilities for the save disposal of these items. If you have a question as to whether they will accept an item you want to dispose of, you can ask them when you call to make an appointment.

Materials deposited at the center will be stored and classified by trained staff who store the wastes on specially designed shelves. At least once every 90 days the contracted hazardous waste hauler will pack the wastes in drums and ship them to the appropriate disposal facilities.

FLY MONITORING IN POULTRY PRODUCTION UNITS

Charles Pitts
Entomology Professor

The fly season is here and we are experiencing isolated problems throughout Pennsylvania with high housefly populations.

Each poultry producer should be aware of the importance of controlling house flies in their facilities in order to have good sanitation in the egg houses and to be a good neighbor to his non-poultry producing neighbors.

This relationship with the community is very important to the poultry industry and must be taken seriously.

The first thing the producer should do is to have some method of sampling the fly population so they will know if the fly population is increasing, decreasing, or holding steady. This will allow the producer to evaluate the efficacy of their fly control program. Methods of monitoring populations of adult flies include fly grids, resting counts, sticky fly paper, baited jug-traps, and spot cards. The most useful in animal facilities are resting counts, sticky fly paper, baited jug-traps, and spot cards.

Resting counts are done by using predesignated areas such as walls, beams, or ceilings and fly counts are made in these areas each day. Several locations are used in each house. By doing these counts over time, you can see what the fly population trends are.

Sticky fly papers are available commercially. The flies caught on the sticky paper give a useful index of fly populations. Also, the flies caught on the paper can be positively identified.

Several of these sticky papers should be placed in each house being evaluated. The fly papers should be left in place for two days and then removed and counts made. The number of papers used should be constant and put back in the same place each time. These papers work well but are messy to handle.

Baited jug-traps are a simple, practical fly monitoring device and can be left in place for up to one week to give a continuous sampling of flies. The same trap can be used for the purpose of fly control. The baited jug-trap consists of a 1-gallon plastic milk jug with four holes (three inches in diameter) cut around the circumference in the upper third of the jug. About 1 tablespoon of bait containing muscalure is placed in the bottom. Flies enter, feed on the bait, and die in the jug.

The number and species of flies can be determined easily. After one week the bait has reduced its effectiveness so the flies and old bait should be dumped and fresh bait added. At least six jug-traps should be used per deep pit house. The traps should be put in locations where flies congregate and the traps should be put in the same place each time counts are made. In poultry houses, 350 flies per week has been used as the threshold for chemical treatment. However, lower threshold may be desired when neighbors are close.

Spot cards are simple devices for measuring fly activity. These are 3 x 5 index cards which are fastened flush to prechosen locations in the facility. Flies resting on the spot cards leave light straw-colored regurgitation spots and dark fecal spots. The number of spots per card is easily counted after an exposure period of 3 to 7 days. The placement of cards is important and they must be placed where flies are observed to rest or fly specks are present. At least 10 cards should be used per facility and an index of 50 spots per card has been used as a threshold for chemical treatment.

These simple methods for monitoring fly populations will aid the producer in evaluating the total fly management program.

Remember that good fly management starts with good manure management, which includes good ventilation and no leaky watering cups.

Look For Yield-Limiting Factors In Field Diagnostic Procedures

ATLANTA, Ga. — Agronomists of the Potash and Phosphate Institute said that farmers should consider the following timely tips.

• Visit your fields. Regular visits to the field are critical to profitable crop management. Fine-tuning production systems require attention to details. In addition to regular soil testing and yield checks at the end of the year, information gathered during the growing season provides a basis for planning. As we adopt site-specific management, detailed information about each field will be essential.

• Use a checklist. A simple list of points to check on each field visit provides a systematic approach to problem identification and helps locate less-obvious causes of yield loss. A field record sheet and map are also helpful. Map problem areas carefully for future reference. Take detailed notes on observations and locations of any problems. Also make a note if the crop looks exceptionally good. Dig for answers. Use a garden trowel to dig up your young plants and check roots for abnormal growth or injury. Early identification of problems may be critical for proper diagnosis. For later field visits, a small trenching tool or spade will be useful for digging up roots.

• Compaction is a common problem. Use a soil probe to check for compaction and soil moisture levels in the upper root zone, or use a soil penetrometer to get a numerical comparison of compacted and normal areas. Dig a soil profile pit and use a knife blade to check compaction at different depths. A pit about 2 feet deep will be adequate. Apply drops of chalk solution on the soil at different depths to give a visual representation of relative compaction. The chalk solution will remain on the face of compacted soil, but will soak into the soil in uncompacted zones.

• Use references. Nutrient deficiencies and pest problems can be identified with picture sheets or cards available from industry sources or from the cooperative extension service. Use a pocket knife to split plant stems and look for insect and disease problems. A small magnifying glass helps identify pest problems. Collect samples of the "unknown" pests and take them to a local dealer, consultant, extension agent, or land grant university diagnostic center. Contact them for insturctions on packaging and shipping.

• Plant analysis helps. Use tissue tests at all growth stages to see if plants are getting adequate supplies of nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium. Simple field test kits are available for in-field use. Laboratory plant analysis is needed for a specific identification of nutrient deficiencies and recommendations for corrective action. Remember nutrient deficiency may be a secondary effect of some other problem—cold weather, moisture stress, compaction—regardless of soil nutrient supplies. This reinforces the need to follow a checklist when making field visits.

• Use a camera. Pictures of problems help reinforce your memory and can be useful in getting diagnositc help. Use a video camera to record problem areas for later reference. Voice comments can be recorded at the same time to help identify the location, conditions, and other information. With pictures, slides, or video, be sure to document both the "problem" area and a comparable "good" area.

• Diagnosing yield-limiting factors requires regular field visits and a systemtic approach. All fields have limiting factors. The more that can be identified and systematically eliminated, the better the probability of achieving the highest potential yield.

For more information, contact Dr. Harold F. Reetz, Jr., west central director, PPI, R.R. 2, Box 13, Monticello, IL 61856-9504, (217)762-2074.

Swenson Urges Farmers To Forge Ties

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — National Farmers Union (NFU) President Leland Swenson recently urged the farmers of North, Central, and South America to forge closer ties to battle the forces which are attempting to foster the industrialization of agriculture at the expense of family farm producers.

Swenson said that farm producers need to go beyond efforts to build viable farm cooperatives and other joint economic ventures and forge closer ties in the political arena to meet the challenges posed to farmers by proposed commercial agreements and treaties — such as the proposed North American Free Trade Agreement and the Initiatives for the Americas proposal — that may foster agricultural industrialization.

Swenson said that the farmers of North and Central America face many common challenges, including access to credit at reasonable rates, the right and ability to own land, receiving a price for commodities that return producers a profit, and a marketing and processing structure that is becoming more and more dominated by a few large transnational corporations.

"As we look to the future, we know that the era of prosperity will only occur if farmers strengthen their links of economic cooperation to confront the challenges of the world before us," said Swenson in a speech to the II Farmers Congress of the Union Nacional de Agricultores y Ganaderors (UNAG), Nicaragua's main farm organization.

Swenson lauded UNAG for its efforts to develop producer-run business ventures in coffee marketing and beef slaughtering.

Swenson, who also serves as a vice president with the International Federation of Agricultural Producers (IFAP), also said he would welcome UNAG into the IFAP fold when IFAP holds its own World Farmers Congress later this year in Quebec City. Currently IFAP has nearly 90 farm organizations from 55 countries within its membership, including the NFU from the U.S.

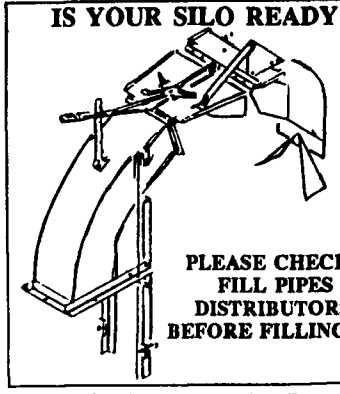
Strengthen And Reseal Your Silo With Shotcrete
STRONGER AND WILL OUT LAST PLASTER

IS YOUR SILO READY TO BE FILLED WITH GRASS SILAGE?



PLEASE CHECK YOUR FILL PIPES AND DISTRIBUTORS NOW BEFORE FILLING SEASON

S&S Silo Service prepares the silo surface by using a 3,000 lb. pressure washer, thus making the silo moist, making a much better surface to bond shotcrete. After shotcreting, S&S always takes away any roughness by applying a steel trowel finish.

The excellent bonding of shotcrete to the silo will keep out moisture and prevent mold from growing on the side of the silo.

Corn Farmers Protect Land With Fewer Pesticides

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — During the last decade, Pennsylvania farmers have saved more than $17.5 million in insecticides by adopting a combination of natural and chemical methods to control the state corn crop's most threatening pest, according to a researcher in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Pennsylvania farmers spent almost $10 million treating 870,000 acres with soil insecticide to stop the corn rootworm in 1980," said Dr. Dennis Calvin, associate professor of entomology.

"But 90 percent of our corn fields that year lost money on chemical rootworm-control methods," he said.

To limit their expensive reliance on pesticides, field crop farmers worked with extension entomologists and county agents to reduce soil insecticide use through a method called integrated pest management, or IPM.

"IPM was started in the 1920s when the boll weevil was becoming resistant to pesticides," he said. "Chemical warfare research in the 1940s led to new insecticides like DDT. When DDT was found to be harmful to human health and the new environment, federal and state governments resumed IPM research.

"To determine the best control methods, researchers study the pest's life cycle and rotations of other crops that discourage the target insect's growth on a particular piece of land," he said.

"For instance, IPM studies found the corn rootworm did not reach economically dangerous levels until the third year of continuous corn in most cases, and that it could not flourish in alfalfa or soybean crops," he said.

"Since 1980, farmers have worked with extension entomologists and county agents to develop a seven-to-ten year crop rotation plan to save money and protect land from pesticides and soil erosion, and to control the rootworm and other pests.

"Today farmers typically grow corn on a particular field for two to three years and then scout for rootworm adults to see if a soil insecticide is needed," he said. "In many cases the rootworm population never reaches economically dangerous levels. So the farmer saves the cost and trouble of applying chemicals.

"Threatening insects also may be controlled by encouraging the growth of other insects that are natural enemies.

"Depending on the extent of a pest problem, IPM may recommend a single application of a specific amount and type of insecticide. Farmers then plant either alfalfa, soybeans, or small grains for four-to-seven years on that piece of land and grow their corn on an unthreatened plot.

"We estimate this pratice saved farmers $17.5 million on almost 1.6 million pounds of soil insecticide through 10 years," Calvin said. "For instance, in 1990 just 580,000 acres were treated at a cost of $6.9 million, with 35 percent of the fields operating above the economic threshold."

Calvin recently attended an IPM adoption meeting convened by the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Washington, D.C., to demonstrate strides Pennsylvania farmers have taken in pest management in the last decade.

He said that pesticide application estimates from the Environmental Protection Agency may be inflated because the figures reflect yearly chemical use and do not account for farmers who use the rotation strategy to apply soil insecticide once every seven to 10 years.

He said that many farmers prefer to either buy grain or harvest before pest infestation, rather than handle and pay for chemical pesticides.

"The primary business for most of these farmers is their dairy operation," he said. "Their main objective is to get enouth silage to feed their cattle through the winter.

NFO Launches 'Price Is Right' Dairy Program

AMES, Iowa — Nearly all farmers and ranchers dream of the "perfect market," where corn is $5/bushel, soybeans are $8/bushel, hogs sell for $60/CWT, fat cattle are $1/pound, and milk is $17/CWT.

Part of this dream can come true, at least for America's dairy producers, through National Farmers Organization's "17/90 Price It Right" program.

The 17/90 program, designed by NFO dairy committees and dairy staff and administered by NFO's dairy department, is designed to raise the price of milk to $17/CWT through collective bargaining when NFO's volume goals are achieved.

The 17/90 program officially kicked off May 21 at an informational meeting for regional directors and designated 17/90 directors, who were selected by the regional directors. Heading the national program is Nick Nerheim, director of special projects.

"At the meeting, we set program goals and discussed how we could best reach those goals," said Ted Strait, director of training. "The staff is very excited about and proud of the program."

Gaining a sufficient milk volume will be a gradual process, said NFO Dairy Department Director Walt Albers.

"We hope to reach our goal in three years, but it can happen faster if NFO members are committed to making the program work," said Albers. "The faster NFO builds milk volume, the faster dairy producers will get the prices they deserve.

Albers says the 17/90 program serves a "dual purpose." First, the program is designed to "stairstep" the market up to $17/CWT. Second, Albers said he hopes it will stabilize the market once $17/CWT is reached.

"Stairstepping" the market up is a process NFO already has mapped out. When NFO controls 20 percent of the milk volume in the top-21 milk-producing states, it will demand and negotiate for $14.50/CWT. At 30 percent, prices will reach $16/CWT. When NFO controls 40 percent of the total milk volume, producers will receive $17/CWT on at least 90 percent of their production.

Albers says he believes dairy families could receive $17/CWT on 100 percent of their production, providing they limit their production to match domestic consumption.

"If dairy producers voluntarily supply only what is demanded for domestic use, they'll receive higher prices on a higher production percentage," he said.

NFO members, dairystaff, field services staff, milk movers, and truckers are being recruited to "spread the word and sign up new NFO dairy members," Albers said.

NFO staff have bumper stickers and videos available describing the 17/90 program. Dairy producers can also find advertisements in Hoard's Dairyman and local newspapers, and on the radio and television.

Blair, Huntingdon Offer Free Presidedress Testing

HOLLIDAYSBURG (Blair Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension in Blair and Huntingdon counties is offering free presidedress nitrogen testing this year.

The test is designed to determine the level of residual nitrogen available from manure to grown corn. Producers often apply extra nitrogen at sidedress time on manured fields because of uncertainty in providing adequate nitrogen.

With the presidedress test, spending extra money on "insurance" nitrogen is no longer necessary, according to extension agent Phil Rzewnicki.

Fields must be sampled for the test when corn is approximately 12 inches tall just before sidedressing. Some crop consultants and agricultural dealers are also performing the field test for their customers.

Farmers can sample fields themselves. Samples are taken between corn rows to a 12-inch depth. After samples are dried, they should be sent to a laboratory, providing rapid turn around in testing nitrogen for the results to be useful.

Appointments with extension agent Rzewnicki can be made by calling the Penn State Cooperative Extension offices in Blair County, (814)695-5541 ext. 210 or Huntingdon County (814)643-1660.

Richardton Announces Trailer-Mounted Dump Box

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — Richardton Mfg., Richardton, N.D., has announced the addition of the 750T to its line of hydraulic side dump wagons.

The 750T has a 1000 cubic feet capacity and is mounted on a tandem axle trailer for increased maneuverability when used with self-propelled choppers.

The 750T maintains a low center of gravity when being loaded, yet dumps its rated load capacity of 15 tons over 11 feet. This is accomplished through a unique slide mechanism which allows the box to be raised and locked before dumping.

The model 750 is also available as a conventional 4-wheel wagon for use with pull type choppers. Richardton also offers a variety of smaller dump wagons as well as a hydraulically operated dumping station conveyor to feed silage into the blower.

Additional information may be obtained from Richardton Mfg. Co., P.O. Box 290, Richardton, ND 58652 or contact Bob Weaver, (717)486-7789.

PDA Ram Test Program Under Way

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Meat Animal Evaluation Center reports that the 1992 Ram Performance Testing Program is well under way, with the 42-day weight being taken on June 2. This represents the midpoint in the 84-day testing program.

These 63 rams, from some of the most progessive sheep breeders in Pennsylvania and some of the surrounding states, will be weighed every 14 days through the 84-day test. At the conclusion of the test, the rams are shorn, measured for height, scanned ultrasonically to determine loin eye mesurement and fat thickness, and given a thorough breeding soundness exam. The rams also must pass a screening process, administered by a sale committee consisting of producers and university personnel, for structural soundness, fleece quality, and breed character.

This year the center has 11 spring born Dorsets, 9 fall born Dorsets, 12 spring born Hampshires, 2 fall born Hampshires, 17 spring born Suffolks, 2 fall born Suffolks, 2 Tunis, 2 Katahdin, 2 Horned Dorsets, 1 Columbia, 1 Montadale, 1 Shropshire, adn 1 fall born Polypay ram. This entire group of rams has maintained an average daily gain (ADG) of 1.01 pounds per day through the 42 days on test.

Approximately the top 75 percent of these rams will be offered for sale in Pennsylvania's 14th Performance Tested Ram Sale.

This sale is scheduled for August 1, at the Ag Arena on the Penn State campus.

There is also an educational program and field day scheduled for the same day. Some of the topics planned for discussion are fencing and rotational grazing with some demonstrations using ongoing research projects at Penn State's Haller Farm. There has been some interest in discussing selecting sheep to enhance carcass characteristics and some request for working dog demonstrations. They are also finalizing plans for a lamb barbeque and are anticipating many exhibitors of sheep equipment and sheep and wool products.

For more information, contact Glenn Eberly, director, Meat Animal Evaluation Center, 651 Fox Hollow Road, State College, PA 16803, (814)238-2527.

Ag Secretary Welcomes Egg Production Facility

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Robert L. Walker has announced the official opening of an egg farm in Carroll County that houses 500,000 laying hens, producing more than 27,000 dozen eggs per day.

Secretary Walker will visit the new facility, known as County Fair Farms, Monday, July 6, to observe the birds and see some of the first eggs to roll off the automated collection belts.

"I am extremely pleased by the opening of County Fair Farms. It will be producing Maryland eggs for Maryland consumers and it will be employing Maryland workers to get the job done," Waler said.

"Because County Fair Farms is located near the plant that will process the eggs and close to the consumers who will use them, I think it is an excellent addition to Maryland's thriving agricultural community," said Walker.

County Fair Farms will have four laying houses, each with a capacity for 125,000 hens. All the eggs will be produced exclusively for Steger's Maryland Fresh Eggs in Hampstead. Claud Steger, the former Maryland Fresh owner, and George Palmer of Bulter, Md., are the owners of County Fair Farms along with Ed, Donald, and Joe Lippy who are providing the agricultural land for the poultry farm. Steger has spent 50 years in the egg business.

"As a by-product, County Fair Farms will provide a significant source of organic fertilizer to be utilized by the Lippy's on their crop land. I am gratified that the farm will utilize a detailed nutrient management plan designed to limit nutrient runoff. In short, the project will benefit both Maryland's economy and environment," Walker said.

In addition to eggs, it is expected that the farm will consume approximately 420,000 bushels of corn and 133,000 bushels of soybeans a year.

"There will be five or six new jobs at County Fair Farms. The venture will also help support the jobs of some 40 to 45 Steger's Maryland Fresh production workers who process and package the eggs for market," Steger said.

"With the potential for market growth, another 10 to 15 jobs could be created at our Hampstead plant. The eggs produced will help meet Maryland Fresh's increased egg demand. By locating County Fair Farms close to the plant, transportation costs will be reduced and consumers will be assured of getting the freshest possible product," said Steger.

GRAZING ALFALFA PASTURES

A recent report on research done at the University of Kentucky illustrates the advantages of using alfalfa in a grazing program.

In this study, yearling steers (three per acre) were rotationally grazed in straight alfalfa pastures beginning in May in each of three years. The cattle were supplemented with a mineral/monensin/poloxalene/ground corn feed using salt to limit intake to 1.2 to 2.2 pounds per head daily.

In the third year, half of the heavier cattle were removed and replaced with lighter cattle, and a third of the steers were removed in September in the second year. Gains for the three years were 546, 478, and 738 pounds per acre for the trial.

The authors concluded alfalfa pastures could support excellent gains when bloat was controlled with poloxalene and the heavier steers were rotated out of the pastures in mid-summer and replaced with lighter cattle.

Many cattlemen have considered alfalfa as too dangerous to include in a grazing program because of the threat of bloat. However, there are several ways alfalfa can be used to great advantage in grazing. A bloat-preventative such as poloxalene can be used very effectively in straight alfalfa stands, and it can be fed easily in grain mixes with intake controlled with salt in the mix.

One particular use of this program is allowing cattle to graze alfalfa hay fields in the fall, rather than taking the last cutting of hay at a risky time.

Alfalfa can also be successfully incorporated in existing grass stands. This can add additional protein and mineral nutrition for the cattle, reduce the amount of nitrogen fertilizers that are needed, and increase the total amount of forage that is available.

At the Penn State Haller Farm research unit, Dr. Lowell Wilson and his coworkers have tested alfalfa, clover, and birdsfoot trefoil as additions to grass pastures. Alfalfa has tended to be the most successful because the land is fertile enough to support good alfalfa production, and a long-standing rotational grazing system at the farm allows the alfalfa to remain in the stands for up to six years.

In pastures of average fertility or less, other legumes would probably be just as productive under a good grazing system. Alfalfa can be added to grass stands with a minimum of tillage by using frost seedings. Under this method, the seed is scattered in the winter, and the subsequent freezing and thawing permits the plant to get established.

More than 80 percent of the frost seedings at the Haller Farm have been successful. Ask your county extension agent for the latest copy of the "Penn State Agronomy Guide" for seeding rates.

Since alfalfa is highly palatable to cattle, some care must be taken to see that the grass species will "match up." Work at the Haller Farm has shown orchardgrass is less desirable than perennial ryegrass in combination with alfalfa because the orchardgrass loses its palatability much more quickly in the spring than ryegrass. The cattle will then tend to selectively graze the alfalfa, and this will reduce the life of the legume in the pasture.

I suspect brome would be similar to orchardgrass, but timothy and bluegrass would be more similar to ryegrass in this respect. Cattle grazing alfalfa have also been shown to have higher magnesium levels during the peak of tetany season.

A key to using any legume in a pasture is to insure the legume is retained for a number of years. Good fertility, a reasonable companion species, and a management system that includes rotational grazing will help legumes remain for several years.

Alfalfa is probably not the monster it is sometimes made to be as part of a good pasture. Some care should be taken to see fertility, companion species, and management of the stand are considered.

Short Shots

A "new generation" of insecticidal eartags is now available.

Some fly resistance has been demonstrated to the pyrethroid tags that have been around for the past few years. Many of the new tags contain organophosphates.

Many companies have products available that are designed for use in a rotational program to reduce the buildup of resistance to a particular class of insecticides. A listing of tags and manufacturers is available from your county extension agent.

A Kansas State study has shown implanting cull cows with growth-promoting implants will effectively enhance weight gain for up to 60 days. There is some previous work with cull cows that shows it will often pay a producer to feed cull cows for 1 to 2 months before selling them to capture some very efficient compensatory gains.

The Penn State Ag Progress Days program is scheduled for August 18-20 at the Russell Larson Research Center at Rockspring.

Special programs located in the dairy and livestock tent will highlight the 50th anniversary of AI in cattle in Pennsylvania and ongoing research and extension programs in the Department of Dairy and Animal Science.

Dr. Gary Wilson, the director of food policy and information of the the National Cattleman's Association, was a featured speaker at the recent Pennsylvania Cattleman's Association Field Day at Linkland Farm in Mercer County.

Gary told the audience that the book "Beyond Beef," a publication very critical of beef written by a nonscientist, has not been very successful. Sales are off so badly that there are thousands of unbound copies that will never make it to the bookshelf.

It is reassuring to know in this case the public will not accept unfounded and untrue speculation about beef as good reading.

Video Has Answers To Compliance Questions

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Many farmers who have filed conservation plans for their highly erodible land still have questions about implementing conservation measures and complying with federal conservation guidelines.

A newly released, 15-minute videotape — featuring a down-to-earth conversation between Soil Conservation Service Chief Bill Richards and four farmers from across the country — answers many of the tough questions growers with highly erodible land ask about conservation compliance.

In the program, "Straight Talk About Your Conservation Plan," Richards tackles issues such as flexibility, changing plans, working with local SCS conservationists, and understanding the appeal system with the directness that has marked his tenure as SCS chief.

The growers in the tape represent four major row-cropping areas and a variety of commodities. Randy Cruise of Pleasanton, Neb.; Bruce Johnson of West Point, Va.; Mark Lanning of Pine Bluffs, Wyo. and Mike Tate of Huntsville, Ala. pull no punches, seeking answers to questions that are both regional and national in scope.

"Straight Talk" was produced for the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) in cooperation with the Soil Conservation Service, National Association of Conservation (Districts, Conservation Technology Information) Center, American Soybean Association, and the National Cotton Council. ICI Americas, a leading producer of crop protection products, underwrote the cost of production through a grant to the NCGA.

Taped on location on a farm near Manassas, Va., the "Straight Talk About Your Conservation Plan" session brought out concerns shared by all the participants, including Richards, a former Ohio farmer. The consistent theme was the desire to keep farm operations profitable, compliance plans flexible, and conservation methods effective. The SCS chief says the discussion chronicled in the video was an important communications link between growers and government.

"The real value of the visit was that we had an opportunity to discuss some of the current problems and some of the current issues and how these provisions are being administered," said Richards. "I think we accomplished a great deal, and that this is the kind of thing we need to do more of. I encourage farmers to have input with policymakers adn other officials of government."

Randy Cruise, who farms 3,000 acres and serves as first vice president of the NCGA, agrees that getting growers' concerns out in the open was a key benefit of the program.

"We've got to work together as a team, we've got to get the information to flow back and forth, and we've got to talk about the issues," Cruise said. "Once we talk about the issues, we can resolve them."

Dick Foell, manager, agribusiness affairs for ICI, hopes the video helps growers with highly erodible land see how compliance can help keep their operation profitable and sustainable.

"Conservation compliance is the law, but it's also good business," said Foell. "American farmers have a vast set of resources available through the Soil Conservation Service that can help them stay profitable. But they also have a lot of questions about compliance. We're hoping the discussion on (Straight Talk) begins to answer those questions and help put these conservation measures on the ground."

The videotape will be available at soil conservation services across the country. The NCGA will also be distributing copies to members who request them, as will the American Soybean Association and the National Cotton Council. The Alliance for Crop Residue Management — a conservation coalition administered through the Conservation Technology Information Center — will be distributing 10,000 copies of the program to member organizations through a grant from ICI. In addition, ICI Agricultural Products technical sales representatives will have copies of the video on hand.

Videos are available on a loan basis by writing National Association of Conservation Districts, P.O. Box 855, League City, TX 77574-0855, Attention — "Straight Talk Video."

Crop Certification Deadline Nears

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania farmers are asked to certify their 1992 crop plantings, land uses, acreage conservation reserve, and other program acreage with the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Final certification date for the program crops corn and sorghum is July 15.

"Certification is how farmers report their acreage to estabish their eligibility to receive the benefits of price support, deficiency payments, and other farm program benefits," said Donald Unangst, ASCS official. Acreage reports are required for all participating farms.

Unangst said that growers not participating in the 1992 programs should also report their acreage to establish planting history, ensure future benefits, and protect crop acreage bases.

After certification, ASCS will select farms at random to verify that acreage reports are accurate. Aerial photographs are available for farmers to help identify their fields.

Unangst said certification is particularly important to producers of quota crops such as tobacco and peanuts.

"In addition to these crops, however, all other crop acreage must be accurately reported," he said.

Spring-seeded crops, except small grains, may be certified at local ASCS offices.

Proper Nutrition Critical For Cattle Performance

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — More than half of the cost of produce beef is feed. This is true whether the feed is grazed, harvested, stored on the farm, or purchased. Thus, the need to effectively use feed is apparent.

Purchased feeds may cost up to three or four times as much as home-grown feeds on a unit basis, so they should be used to the greatest advantage. This can be best accomplished by using cattle rations that are balanced and by feeding supplements that furnish only the nutrients missing in home-grown feeds.

A ration is the feed the animal receives in 24-hour period. A balanced ration is one that furnishes all the nutrients needed, in proper amounts to allow animals to fulfill a specific purpose such as maintenance, growth, gestation, or locatation.

Dr. John Hough, education and research director of the American Polled Hereford Association, said that cattlemen need to have considerable knowledge of the specific nutrient needs of different animals. It is critical to know the nutrient content on available feeds.

"Many different feeding situations exist in a herd. A balanced ration for a dry, pregnanat cow is not the same as a balanced ration for a cow nursing a calf and being rebred," Hough said.

Overfeeding and underfeeding are expensive. Excessive gains on females may result in impaired reproduction and mothering ability. Slow gains on steers are likely to be inefficient and costly. High-energy rations may result in rapid gain, but be sure there is enough protein in the ration to ensure a profitable feed conversion rate.

"A cattleman who is making sure his animals are getting the right amount of grass and feed supplements will have the most efficient and economical feeding program. By feeding the right amounts of properly-formulated rations, gains will costs less and occur more efficiently," Hough said.

Balanced rations are developed according to feeding standards developed from research observations across the country by the National Research council. Hough said these standards can be obtained from any county extension office.

The standards list the proper amount of minerals, fiber, dry matter, total digestible nutrients, and other factors needed to build a balanced ration.

"A well-fed animal, whether it's a cow with a calf, a finishing steer, or replacement heifer will generate the best returns for the least amount of money," Hough said.

N.W. Polled Hereford Sale Announces Results

MERCER (Mercer Co.) — The annual Spring Show and the Sale of the Northwest Pennsylvania Polled Hereford Association was held at the Mercer 4-H Park.

The event featured a show at 2 p.m., judged by Park Russel of Erie County and a sale of all animals at 7 p.m. Harry Anderson of Georgetown was the auctioneer.

In all, 17 females sold for a total of $15,017.50 for an average of $883.38. A total of eight bulls sold for $8,825 for an average of $1,103.13. The sale totaled 25 lots, bringing $25,842.50 for an average of $953.70 per head.

The grand champion bull, a February 1991 son of Louada Voyageur 4W, consigned by Glen Filges of Hillside Hereford Farm, Butler, sold to John H. Morrison of Seneca for $1,450. Mountain Ridge Farm of Schellsburg consigned the reserve champion bull, a March 1990 son of KF Academy Statesman 40X.

The grand champion heifer, a February 1991 daughter of SVF Longfellow 32X, was consigned by Stephen Fritz of Scenic View Farm in Manns Choice. She was purchased by John Vidovich III of Midland for $1,200. Charles Vogel of Evans City bought the reserve grand champion heifer, a June 1991 calf by Ghost Ryder for $875. She was consigned by Don Hennon of Bar H Farm in Grove City.

Neil F. Weingart of Circle W Herefords in Salem, Ohio consigned the champion cow/calf pair, a May 1988 GPF 67K Maximizer 4938 daughter with a December 38 Special heifer at side. The pair sold to Bradish Family Farm of Latrobe for $1,650.

A Satisfied Customer...

JOHN R. RODGERS, of Belleville had three styles of fencing installed totaling a mile on his farm. John offers these comments. "I looked at others fencers and determined that Beaver Fence Systems had the people that could do a quality job and a quality fence to keep the cattle where I want them. The flexibility of the fence gives me full utilization of the land with maximum efficiency. The job was completed in two days including a barnyard fence, plus 6 and 4 wire pasture fencing."

BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds

BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.

MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregation, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.

ON-FARM MIXING

A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that

- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

WE CAN SAVE YOU MONEY!
By Prolonging The Life Of Your Engine Transmission Etc

IXL
Anti-Friction Metal Conditioner

Anti-friction Metal Conditioner
Science brings a new dimension to Anti-Friction

An oil additive metal conditioner product ahead of its time, IXL gives protection far superior to just oil or lubricants. By blending IXL, to your oil, you can give tons of your equipment priceless protection. For pennies per ounce, IXL saves you money on Maintenance Costs, Fuel, Etc. IXL products are designed to be used in gas & diesel engines (new and used), Hydrostatic, manual, and automatic transmissions, compressors, gear boxes, hydraulics, turbos, pumps, bearings (all types) and much more. The results of using IXL are: minimum metal wear, giving maximum engine and machine life; IXL also helps to maintain and recondition seals and gaskets keeping these items pliable, firm and flexible, which will help prevent leaks. IXL is NOT a lubricant fortifier, such as graphite, moly or PTFE. IXL reduces heat, friction and wear without changing tolerances. Reducing friction will release energy previously expended to overcome ordinary mechanical resistance. This energy is now available as a positive force, working to increase power, performance and fuel savings. IXL is a metal conditioner which treats the metals 3 to 5 microns deep, not the oil. IXL is biodegradable, non-toxic. IXL is one of the highest quality products on the market today. 100% SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR YOUR MONEY BACK.

Watch Out For Pinkeye In Cattle

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — As fly populations grow during hot summer months, livestock producers and dairy farmers should watch for signs of pinkeye in cattle, said an extension veterinarian in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Flies readily transmit the bacteria that cause pinkeye," said Dr. Thomas Drake, research assistant in Penn State's Animal Diagnostic Laboratory. "Each year we see a lot of cases beginning in late May and early June, when flies really come on strong.

"They pick up the bacteria by feeding near the eyes of infected cattle, especially in the fluid that runs from the eyes," Drake said. "Then they fly to other cows, spreading the bacteria."

Once it gets started in a herd, pinkeye bacteria can persist for years in a few animals. "These animals are generally older and have developed immunity to the disease," Drake said. "They keep bacteria alive, and put younger animals without immunity at risk."

Pinkeye in cattle is caused by a different bacterium than the one that causes pinkeye in humans, and people are not at risk of catching the disease from cattle. However, the symptoms are similar. "The disease starts out with a sore, red, runny eye, much like what humans get," Drake said.

As the disease progresses, the cornea becomes cloudy. This cloudiness develops into a lesion, which can ulcerate, causing blindness. "If the disease isn't treated, the animal can lose the infected eye," Drake said.

Also, the performance and production of dairy and beef cattle drop tremendously. "If you've ever had a scratched eye, you know how painful it can be," Drake said. "When an animal gets pinkeye, it loses its appetite.

"Controlling flies is the key to preventing pinkeye in cattle," Drake said. A variety of products such as a fly-repelling ear tags, oils, screens and back rubbers are available. Keeping stables and manure drops clean limits breeding places for flies.

If you notice pinkeye symptoms in your herd, antibiotics are the best treatment. "Antibiotics for pinkeye are available in a spray for the eye, or they can be injected for longer-lasting action," Drake said. "Consult your veterinarian about the best treatment for your situation."

ELS Manure Pumps & Spreaders Check Ours Before You Buy!

We have a new design manure pump that we feel will chop & pump more solids for the money (and HP). Bearings run in oil. Knives make over 3000 cuts per min. Stationary or portable, manual or hydraulic lift. Rent one or buy one, but be sure to try one! We also have our standard model, works well for less bedding with less HP.

We also have semi & liquid spreaders ground drive in 3 standard sizes, also PTO drive & special orders.

We make expanded metal tractor wheels w or w/o shocks, the wheel with more grip & less slip. Check our prices!

Use our forms to make your own poured walls, round or square pits, retaining walls, basement or barn walls. 2x8 panels up to 190' in one pour. Cheaper & much stronger than block walls filled with concrete. We sometimes have used equipment.

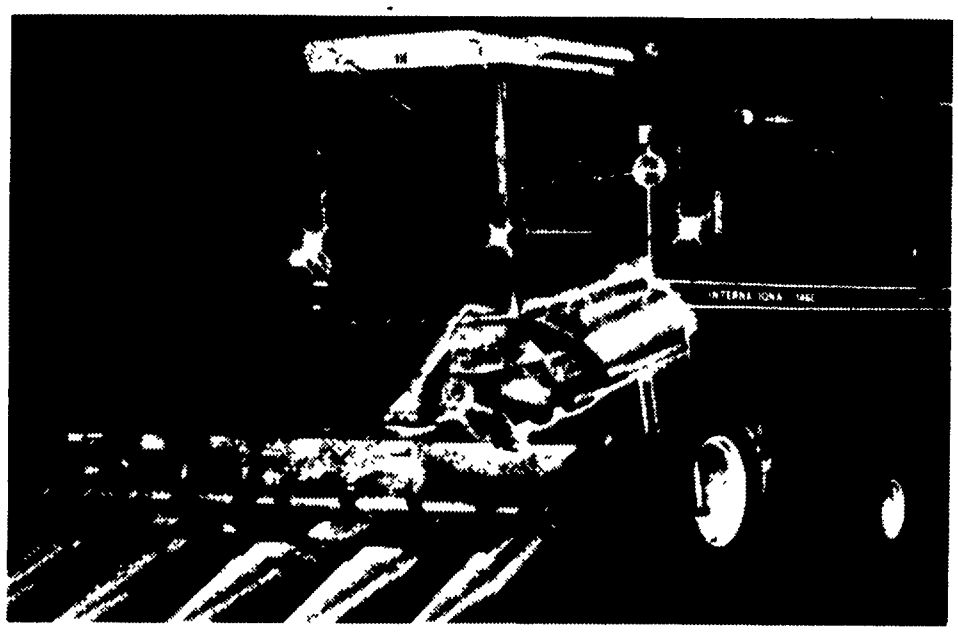
YOU DON'T NEED TO BE A MATHEMATICIAN TO LEARN THE 3 LAWS OF HOOBER RECONDITIONED AXIAL-FLOW COMBINES. YOU ONLY NEED TO TRY ONE.



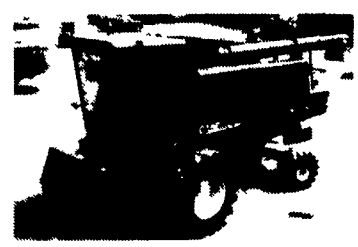
1st LAW OF HOOBER RECONDITIONED AXIAL-FLOW COMBINES

FOURTEEN (14) YEARS OLD IS NOT EQUAL TO (=) WORN OUT

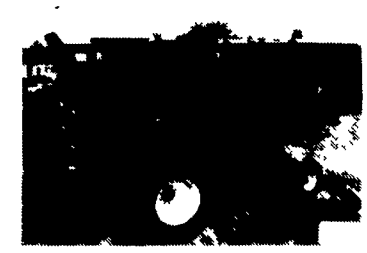
Because of the simple design of the CASE IH Axial Flow Combines, they can be reconditioned by Hoober's expert combine mechanics to like new condition, so they will provide 2nd and 3rd owners years of satisfactory and profitable operation.

2nd LAW

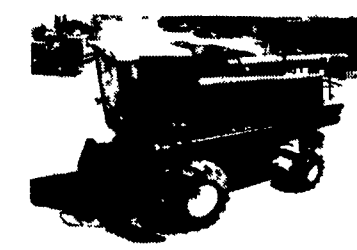
OF HOOBER RECONDITIONED AXIAL-FLOW COMBINES



IH 1460, 1985, 2191 Hrs., 30.5x32 & 18.4x16.1, AC, AHHC, Spinrs, Chopr (U6238)



IH 1460, 1981 3000 Hrs., 28Lx26, AC, AHHC (U6454)



IH 1460, 1982, 28Lx26 & 18.4x16.1 AC, AHHC, Feedr Revsr, Spinrs (U6219)

OF HOOBER RECONDITIONED AXIAL-FLOW COMBINES

4,000 HOURS PLUS (+) HOOBER RECONDITIONING EQUALS (=) YEARS OF DEPENDABLE SERVICE

4,000 hours on a conventional combine usually means too much trouble to be dependable. Axial-Flow Combines with 4,000 hours reconditioned by Hoober's have proven to run for years when bought by farmers in Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey and New York.

A CASE-IH AXIAL-FLOW COMBINE SERVICED BY EXPERT HOOBER COMBINE MECHANICS EQUALS (=) LITTLE OR NO DOWN TIME DURING HARVEST.

When Hoober's expert combine mechanics service Axial-Flow Combines in the off-season, they run trouble-free through the season.

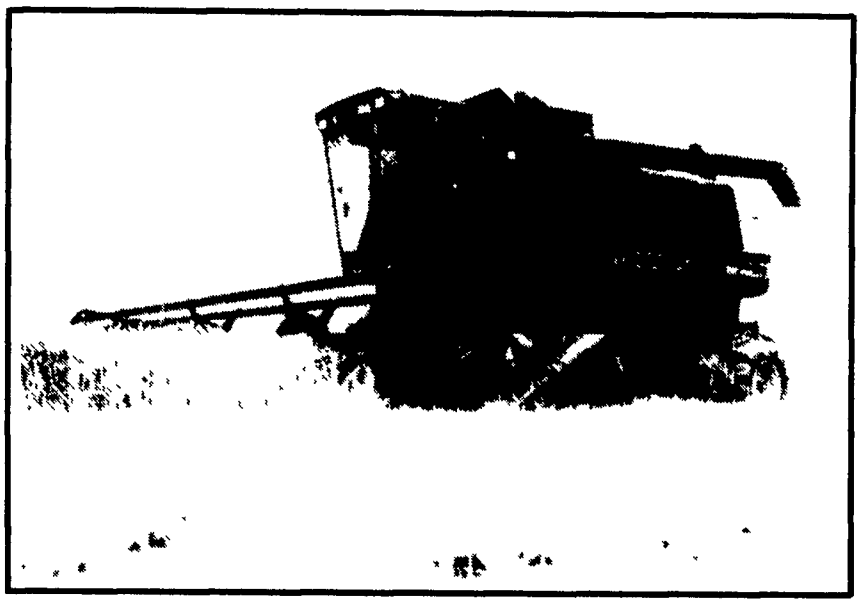
WHAT DO YOU WANT FROM YOUR COMBINE?

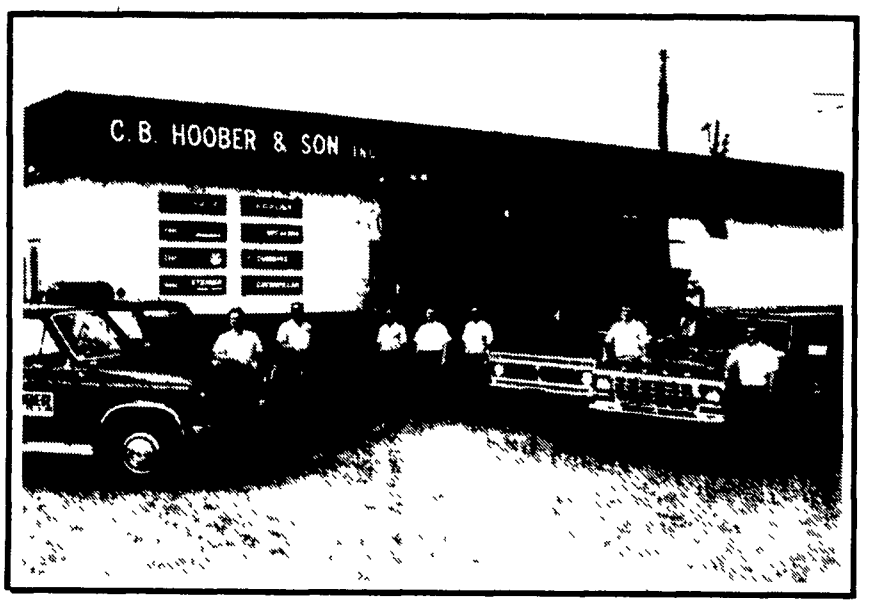


DEPENDABILITY?

Moving when the grain and weather conditions are fit: that is what CASE IH's Axial Flow Combines do. They are built tough to last— many are running over 4,000 hours. How long will an axial flow last? We don't know yet.

RELIABILITY?

Compared to conventional or other style rotary combines, the Axial Flow puts more premium quality grain in the tank and leaves less grain in the field. Why else do most all the growers of food quality corn own axial flow's?



A GOOD DEALER?

C.B. Hoober & Son, Inc. have specialized in Axial Flow combine service since their introduction in 1977 (5) Hoober servicemen work on combines year-round. Where else can you get that support?

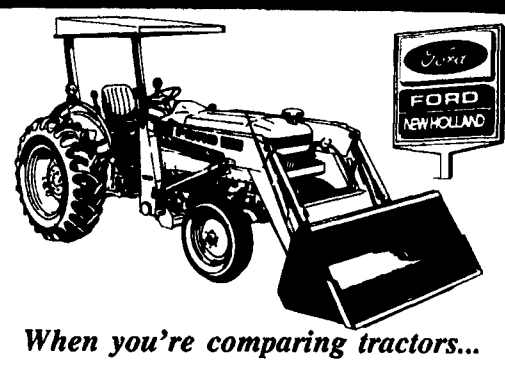
LANDSCAPING



When you're comparing tractors...

FORD OFFERS THE LANDSCAPER MORE

Top link sensing on Ford 32- to 55-PTO-hp tractors offers the ultimate in 3-point control for implement or blade work. Two-lever control allows precise adjustment for proper depth and pull requirements.

Check out these other performance features:

- Deluxe closed-center hydraulics let you adjust the flow rate for each remote
- Hydraulic and draft/position controls are within easy, natural reach to the right
- Optional 8x8 synchronized transmission allows easy shifting on-the-go
- Standard telescoping stabilizer and flexible link ends allow fast, easy hook up.

fiberdome SILO CHUTE

made with fiberglass, the material of the future — and proven in the past —

The Fiberdome chute is designed and engineered to be installed on most types of silos. Its structure allows it to withstand the toughest beating the weather elements or silo unloading systems can possibly dish out.

The chute is constructed in full 7½' sections to minimize the number of joints. Connecting joints have a 2½" tongue and groove design to keep feed in and water out. The large ribbed construction adds stability and strength.

Fiberglass is durable, corrosion-proof, attractive and translucent, allowing sunlight to pass through. Sunlight quickly dries interior moisture in the chute. The hard gleaming gelcote surface will remain for many years.

SOLID PERFORMANCE

Hillside Farms Inc., includes their own dairy store. They began a jugging operation in 1977. Being close to a metropolitan area gives them a ready market for their farm fresh milk.

They have been in the registered holstein business since 1885. William is a former director of the National Holstein Association. Their most recent classification shows 7 EX VG 31 GP 26 and 4 G. with BAA 106.3.

Since Nov. 1988, Hillside has purchased their calf heifers milking and dry cow rations from WELLCO FEEDS, a Purina Plant in Wyalusing, Pa. The milking cows are on a dual ration utilizing Purina Hi-E (B)35 UIP concentrate fed through a DeLaval feed car. The forages consist of haylage and dry hay.
